Faces Drug Charge

Mexico Fires Ambassador

NEW YORK (UP1) -The Mexican government Saturday fired its Bolivian ambassador who was arrested in New York as an international narcotics smuggler with $13,500,000 worth of heroin for sale to the underworld market.

Shortly after the Mexican foreign ministry atripped Salvador Pardo-Bollard, 55, of any possible claim of diplomatic immunity, federal nar-cotics officials said in New York that his French tact," the world's biggest narcotics smuggler, had eluded a French police net. (See also

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.-U.S. government efforts to end a union boycott that has halted shipment of American wheat to Russia collapsed today.

Talks between U.S. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz and union leaders at Miami Beach were broken off

Through a spokesman, Wirtz said they were unable to resolve the issue. The secretary had tried to persuade the Maritime union officials to lift an ban on loading wheat aboard foreign ships bound for Russia by longshoremen in Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports.

Unions Fight Waivers

The unions are demanding that the U.S. government revoke waivers granted to Continental Grain Company allowing it to ship only 38 per cent of a 1,000,000-ton wheat sale in U.S. yessels. The labor leaders also demanded that no such waivers be granted in the future on shipments to

The Continental sale of wheat under an export licence granted by the commerce department is worth about $75,000,000.

Future grain shipments to Russia may eventually total $400,000,000 but the longshoremen's boycott could prevent it from ever leaving U.S.

Only a small amount of the grain had been shipped by Continental before the boycott began.

The first shipload arrived in Odessa Friday. Wirtz postponed leaving here for Washington several times as the marathon negotiations to end the boycott continued.

Unduly Reluctant

TWO million dollars is hardly to be shrugged off on the provincial scene as chicken feed. It is almost as much as the increase allotted in the coming year to the province's spending on social welfare, for instance, and two-thirds as much as the University of Victoria will receive from the government.

But nevertheless Trade Minister Bonner appears unduly cool toward the idea of British Columbia exhibiting at the 1967 World Exhibition in Montreal, which he says would cost at least this much if anything worthwhile were to be done.

Mr. Bonner has not ruled out participation in the fair, but says he wants to see first where there would be a definite return on the investment. He doubts that an exhibit would draw many tourists from the east all the way across the country, or much industrial capital for that matter.

The minister's estimate of the minimum amount of money that would have to be spent is itself open to question: it would be the quality rather than the size of the project that would count most. But presuming him right in this regard, the foreseeable direct financial return on the cost is surely not the British Columbia must ask itself not only if it ran afford to be represented, but if it can afford not to be represented on the world stage on this Canadian centennial occasion. The province, for all its otherwise-expressed pride in its progressiveness and its important part in the national economy, would appear in a poor light by its absence.

Were the shoe on the other foot—the exhibition in Vancouver and the eastern provinces hanging back as if they were not members of the Canadian family -one has little doubt about what Mr. Bonner would

If the fair is a success as it should be in the sense that the general benefits to the country's economic and international stature outweigh the expected direct cash deficit, British Columbia certainly will share to some degree in those benefits. The province ought also to share in achieving such success even lacking proof that it will quickly get its money back.

A Lord Rector

THE move by undergraduates to initiate the office of lord rector at the University of Victoria should receive general approbation throughout this com-munity and among all those who are interested in the activities and progress of our new university.

As in a number of British universities the post of lord rector will be a purely honorary one with the incumbent being elected by the student body. If the idea goes forward it is anticipated that the rector will serve a one-year term, during which time his sole duty will be to deliver one major address to the undergraduates of the university.

If the experience of other universities who sup-port such an office is anything to go by, the Uvic lord rectorship will be a much sought after and highly

According to the student body the first lord rector will be a distinguished Canadian, but in following years the position wil be open to individuals of renown and stature from anywhere in the world.

The student council should be congratulated for coming up with such a useful and unique—to Canada, at least—proposal which will both enhance the reputation of their university and bring it recognition

Valuable Project

THE Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce is adding another valuable undertaking to the long list to its credit with its nation-wide campaign to draw more people to retire in this locality. Many Canadians in other parts of the country need little enough bidding, for Victoria's attractions are widely but the distribution of the Jaycees' brochure giving facts and figures about the city seems bound to swell their numbers.

As the president of the Junior Chamber implies, the importance Victoria gives to its tourist business should not evershadow the worth of its "retirement industry," if such it can be called. The virtue of the latter in comparison with the former, from an economic point of view, is that although the daily expenditures of retired persons may be considerably less than those of the short-term visitors on a per capita basis, they continue the year around. The average tourist may spend two or three days of the year in the city; the retired people close to 365.

Nor is it to be overlooked that citizens of this pay local taxes directly on the homes they buy or indirectly through rent, but send no children to school at heavy municipal expense; they thus alleviate the tax burden on the rest of the population.

The bureaus whose functions are to attract tourists to Victoria and Vancouver Island perhaps cannot be expected to allot much of their effort to seeking to bring new residents of this type to our community. It would be unfair and unreasonable to call on hotels, motels and the like to help finance this endeavor when their interest naturally is in customers.

The Jaycees' project is all the more welcome for that fact, and Victorians no doubt will be unanimous in their gratitude and their wishes for the Junior Chamber's utmost success.

One of the dangers both networks face when they contract for a U.S. series is that it might be dropped by the U.S. network part way through the season. When that happens the Canadian network must find a replacement.

All either network can do is choose what seems likely to be a strong show and hope that poor ratings don't kill it.

EVOLUTION AND EYESTRAIN

Evolution developed human eyes for outdoor, distance seeing. Along came the printing press, and the face of the world began to change. A hundred years ago 90 per cent of the people lived in rural areas . . . now there are only 20 per cent. Everybody reads ten times as much as 50 years agoa high school or college student 15 times as much.

Civilization has made long hours of reading or close work essential. Eves that would function perfectly well in an outdoor life where detailed and critical seeing are unnecessary often fail to stand the burden of prolonged close work without help. Eyes should be examined at least every two years to keep them operating at peak efficiency and comfort,

Totems Win School Title

By JIM TAYLOR (Colonist Staff Reporter)

COURTENAY - Victoria High School Totems, brutal on the backboards and poised when it really counted, won the Colonist Cup and the Vancouver Island High School basketball championship here last night with a 44-39 victory over Courtenay Towhees.

It was a victory built around the superlative defensive play of Barney Spaven and Ron Stubbings, and it sent Totems into the B.C. tournament in Vancouver March 4-7 as the top club of a strong Island entry.

Joining them there will be the second-place Towhees, Oak Bay High, third after a 46-40 victory over Nanaimo Hub-sters, and Esquimalt Dockers, who grabbed the final anot by beating Chemainus Timber. Timber. 53-45.

There are steelhead, and there are trout, in Muir Creek, but the searun rainbows and cutthroats can't get more than a couple of miles up the river before they are blocked by falls.

We had heard stories of falls on Muir Creek, but we had never met anyone to confirm just where the falls start. Last Sunday we set out to walk the river to find out just how far the fish can go up Muir Creck and halfway along our six-hour tramp of the river we found the falls. By the time we found them we were right in the middle of that terrible Sunday gale and windstorm, coupled with driving rain, but by then we were at the point of no return just keep on going to the mouth. Actually a river is one spot where you can go in a atorm and hardly notice it, except for the odd branch falling down overhead and the rustling of the timbers above. In our Plarex waterproofs we kept quite dry, but wife Taffy fell flat on her face in the cold river while crossing one

Mulr Creek is about eight miles past (west) Sooke. Other partners for the day were John and Kristin

We went 25 miles up the logging road to the first logging bridge over Muir Creek and this was to be the starting point. Don't plan to drive up this road. Even if the gates are open when you enter, they most likely will locked when you want to come out.

They do catch a few small trout above this logging bridge, but they must be resident stream trout which have on with the bigger and scrappy searuns, below

At this point we didn't know whether we were above or below the suspected falls.

Below the bridge was a beautiful pool . . . crystal clear, sandy spots, a few boulders and a rock wall on the far side, an ideal andt for steelies. We worked it over thoroughly

Then the river drifts to another beautiful spot. We climbed along a slate wall and then waded across the river to a little island beside a deep, still and narrow run. If there were steelies in this river they had to be there.

Then we had to cross a deeper run to get further downstream. Kristin had no waders, only gumboots, so John had to piggyback her across the river at a dozen points as we criss-crossed our way downstream.

This is a very pretty, but barren, river in its upper reaches. The river deepened and canyon area closed in on us. We had to take to the bank and eventually we had to climb up, crashing through bush until we came to the

Here a logging trail followed the river course high above the river and a little stream entered on the east This was the area of last fall's Muir Creek fire. For acres around us it was just a scene of charred logs and bure soil. But forestry crews had been in already to replant and little Douglas fir seedlings dot the ground . . . and they have taken well. Someday this will be new forest.

was in this burned-out area, a couple of hours after we had started our river tramp, that we saw the falls. There isn't one particular high falls. Rather, the river drops steeply for a couple of hundred yards in a series of falls and rapids. We doubt that any fish get by them.

There is one beautiful pot-hole-type pool and then the river turns and drops into another big pool. Then there is fast water for several hundred yards

It was below this that we climbed back down the steep bank to the river, right at a couple of nice holes and a fast run where John saw the silver flash of a fish.

The river was fairly deep at this spot and running fast, but we had to cross. Taffy took a wader full of water as the water was too high for her. Big dog Duchess bucked at crossing the fast water, but finally had to do it or be

Now, we know that with a pair of chest waders it is possible to come this far up (about two miles) the river from the road . . . and that is what we would do another time. From this spot down is where it is possible to take steelhead and cutthroat.

A few pools further along we did take a nice 16-inch silver cutthroat from among the boulders in a narrow and deep run. It was the only fish of the day, but proved they

Much of the remaining part of the river . . . the lower reaches ... we have written about before. We criss-crossed back and forth several times before we hit the big pool and the bank where we have always been stopped before by high water. Of special interest was a small placer mining rig and a little cabin we stumbled onto along the bank.

The river was deep, it was high tide, and to finally ross the river. John, who was wearing chest waders, had to piggyback Taffy, as well as Kristin.

Carrots for Show

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

PRIZE-WINNING CARBOTS (F.J., Cadboro Bay)-There is a technique used by really hotshot gardeners for raising a few super-dooper carrots for exhibition purposes, but it is too laborious for everyday use.

Drive a crowbar into the ground and wiggle it around until you have a tapered hole two feet deep. Space these holes a foot apart along the carrot row. Fill the holes with a mixture of sifted topsoil two parts, peat moss one part and coarse sand one part. When mixing, add 11/2 cups of hydrated lime and one cup Vigoro or similar balanced fertilizer to each barrow of soil-peat mixture.

Spread out your carrot seeds on a sheet of white paper and pick out the biggest and fattest. Sow two seeds in each planting station, later thinning to the strongest of the two seedlings. Cover each station with a jam jar until the seeds are through.

The same technique is used to produce parsnips for the show bench, but in this case the holes are made four feet deep. For some strange reason, parsnips are judged largely by the length of the useless tail or whip," hence the need of a deeper hole. Getting the stupid things out of the ground without breaking the whip is one of the most exasperating jobs in gardening.

PRAYER PLANT (C.M., Nanaimo)-Your houseplant is maranta bicolor, a native of Brazil and a sister of the plant from which we get arrowroot for biscuits. Its common nickname is Prayer Plant, from its habit of folding its leaves at night as in prayer. --

The maranta likes quite a bit of fibre in its potting soil, and a mixture of three parts purchased African violet soil and one part shredded peat moss works well. It is a good idea to add a rounded teaspoonful of flake or small lump charcoal plus a level tablespoonful of bone meal to each potful of soil mixture.

Coming from the humid jungles of Brazil, this attractive foliage plant requires quite a bit of atmospheric moisture and will usually do best in the kitchen where the steam from cooking and from the boiling kettle help maintain a high degree of humidity. The soil should be maintained just barely moist, never bone dry nor soggy wet; especially avoid sog-giness in the bottom of the pot. Do not allow drainage water to stand in

RHUBARB MANAGEMENT (R.T.L., Victoria) - Your rhubarb, planted in the spring of 1963, may remain undisturbed for four years before it becomes necessary to dig up, divide and replant the root clumps, but they should be given a generous surface mulch of old rotted manure every spring and plenty of water through the summer.

You may pull just a few stalks from each plant this year, and a full normal crop next year and thereafter, but all pulling should cease about the time the strawberries are ripening. The plants will need all their leaves from the end of June on. in order to plump up their roots for the following year's cropping.

ART BUCHWALD Meets Hen-Pecked Commissar

Russians Defect

WASHINGTON -- There has been a lot of talk in the newspapers lately about Russian defectors. We've always wondered why Russians defect and the other day we were fortunate to inerview one who gave us some interesting details on his defection.

We shared a table with him at Bassin's Cafeteria and introduced ourself. He said:

"I am Nicolai Sergevitch, Russian defector." "I'm very pleased to meet you, air. I haven't met many Russian defectors." "Is nice meeting you." he replied. "I don't meet many people who put chutney on knockwurst."

* * * "May I ask you a personal question? Why did you defect?" "It is a simple story," he said. "I am big shot in Soviet government. I have my own car, my own bureau, my own dacha. I am up and coming Communist commissar. No one has better future than me.

"I don't understand. You didn't hate Russia, then?" "Hate? I loved Russia. It is my motherland. Even now

"Then why did you defect?"

"One day I am called in by my superior and he says, Nicolai, we are sending you to North America on top secret mission. We trust you as loyal Soviet Communist, but just to make certain that you come back we are going to keep your wife behind. If anything goes wrong you know what will happen to her.'

"I say, 'Don't worry Comrade Guzenko. I am loyal to the motherland. You can count on me.'

"So I go home and tell my wife I am going on top secret mission to United States. She says I am always going somewhere on top secret mission and she is getting sick and tired of it, and she is fed up with running a hotel, and I should do some other type work because a wife she is not, and I am a lousy husband because I never give her enough money, and on and on and on.

"Then her mother, who is living with us, says her daughter should have never married below her class, and maybe I am asking for such trips to be away from home because I probably have a girl friend somewhere, and on and on and on. "So off I go to North America. Every day I get letters from wife telling me plumbing is no good, neighbors is making too much noise, she can't buy any curtains, window in cellar is broken, her brother is out of job, and everything is lousy.

She says wait until I get home because she is really going to tell me a thing or two and she is not going to take my going away lying down. "After two weeks of letters I say to myself, 'North America is not such a bad place after all. Maybe I will

"But," we said, "what about your wife? Didn't they tell you if you refused to come back they would do some-

"Exactly, comrade," he smiled. "You are now eating with a man who committed the perfect crime."

Neil Hamilton, for the Jerry Lewis comedy. The Patsy. Neil was under contract 40 years ago as a top star at Paramount. Here is another record. The Hamiltons have been married 42 years, the first and only for both.

Amanda Blake who plays Kitty in Gunsmoke says that when and if the show goes into limbo—it begins its 11th year next season—she will never work again, unless she really has nothing else to do. Amanda, smart as well as pretty—ask Matt Dillon—reckons she will have an income of $100,000 in her own private kitty, from the show, for each of the next 20 years. And you can't look much further than that,

Old-time star Norma Shearer, long retired, will be a grandmother for the second time when daughter Katherine has her second child in mid-April. Katherine is married to Eichard Anderson, who has a starring role with Ann-Margret in Kitten With a Whip.

Heart Deaths Drop

NEW YORK (AP) - The American Heart Association reported Saturday the upward trend in cardiovascular disease deaths among middleaged men had been reversed.

Dr. John J. Sampson, association president, said there had been a six per cent decrease in the 1962-63 year of cardiovascular disease deaths among men between 45 and 64.

It Will Look Better

This small area, once gorse-covered triangle at intersection, of Cadboro Bay Road and Beach Drive, is a mess now, but will look better when Cadboro Bay Road widening project is finished. Area is to be graded and seeded to give grass-covered slope which will allow better vision at intersection than former gorse. Oak trees are to be preserved.-William A. Boucher)

Strike Chief Explains Shipyard Pressures

By HARVEY SHEPHERD

Working conditions in the shipyards have contributed much to "pressure building up" among shipyard employees now on strike, says a leading union figure in the dispute.

James McConachy, Victoria business agent for the boilermakers' union, said last night the public is not aware of many ef the factors which have led to the current strike.

Perhaps, he said, Victoria Chamber of Commerce president E. E. Pearlman and others who have called for a quick end to the strike should go down to the yards one morning during a cold anell and look at the toilets. with the water in the bowls covered with a film of ice.

On one occasion, he said, a septic tank in the yards overflowed for about a year before the unions succeeded in getting the company involved to have the tank pumped out.

He said the unions have been fighting in vain for years to have lockers provided in which shipyard workers could put their personal belongings.

He said he has seen shipyard workers laid off one afternoon and rehired the next morning. The unions aren't making an issue of the point, said Mr. Mc-Conachy, but shipyard workers have no coffee breaks.

"Working conditions are very important," he said. "The men in the yards, they resent a lot of these things."

And he said such faults in working conditions would not be costly for the companies to remedy.

He said unions should not have to fight for conditions which in many cases are already spelled out in existing contracts.

He agreed with a reporter's suggestion that working conditions are as important as wages in shipyard workers thinking in the shipyards

He also said a provision in a suggested contract settlement, calling for three weeks' annual vacation after 12 years' service, is "ridiculous in this day and age."

'The Public Doesn't Know'

The current contract calls for three weeks after 15 years. He said that to put a cash value on this provision as a fringe benefit means the 95 per cent of the workers not eligible for the three weeks would be subsidizing the others.

The provision was in a settlement proposed unanimously by a conciliation board, rejected by the unions and accepted by the companies before the walkout Feb. 5 and 6 of 2,000 workers at Victoria Machinery Depot and Yarrow's in Victoria and Burrard Dry Dock in North Vancouver.

'With Husband All the Way'

Union and management representatives are to resume negotiations Wednesday.

Strike Chief Supports Shipyard Contract Bid

A leader in Victoria's shipyard labor unions has heartily endorsed Victoria Machinery Depot president Harold Husband's corr troversial bid for a federal weathership contract.

James McConachy, president of the Victoria Metal Trades Council, said last night he is with Husband all the way in this thing."

And he called on E. E. Pearlman, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, to join him in publicly backing Mr. Husband in his bid to have the ship built by VMD rather than Burrard Dry Dock of North Vancouver.

Mr. Husband has been strongly criticized by officials of Burrard Dry Dock and the cities of North Vancouver and Vancouver for personally approaching federal government leaders to give the $10,000,000 weathership contract to VMD, despite the fact Burrard submitted a slightly lower tender on the contract.

ference between the two tenders share of government contracts. In recent years, for instance, the federal government has had seven destroyer-escorts built on the west coast "and Victoria has had 2½ of them," he said.

* * *
The one-half ship, he said, was HMCS Fraser. Yarrow's in Victoria submitted the low tender on that ship, he said, but the hull for the Fraser was built at Burrard. Yarrow's is a subsidiary of Burrard. Similarly, he said, Yarrow's submitted the low tender on the icebreaker Campel and Burrard built the hull. He said he had fought for the Camsel job to come to Victoria. Burrard did all the loft work on the Pacific Naval Laboratories ship now in the hands of Yarrow's, Mr. McConachy said. He said VMD faces all the problems of bidding against two companies and Burrard and Yarrow's represent themselves as separate. Yet, when it suits them, they work together, he

Paradoxically, VMD, Yarrow's and Burrard management are acting jointly in the strike which has stopped work at the three yards for more than two weeks and Mr. McConachy is a leading member of the commit-tee bargaining for both Victoria and North Vancouver em-

They stare down silently, like haughty members of a royal family-caribou, mountain goats, big horn and Fannin sheep.

Beneath them this week, Lougheed and two visitors from Whitehorse - Wilfred (Curly) Desrosiers, and his wife, Belle-sat and talked of hunting.

To most women, hunting is a male preserve—and hunting talk, perhaps, a bore. But for soft-spoken Belle Desrosiers, it's her living. This Yukon-born daughter of a Northwest Mounted policeman is, at 43, Canada's only woman licensed outfitter and hunting guide.

She and her husband were on the last leg of a holiday in visiting their hunting clients.

Top Woman Hunting Guide Leads Sportsmen to Game

They left shortly afterward for their Whitehorse home. Lougheed's magnificent trophies once roamed the mountain country of the Yukon, and are reminders of his last four hunting expeditions with the Desrosiers. Belle and Curly were married in 1945, and a few years later established their outfitting and guide business. They are two of an even dozen guides registered with the Yukon Outfitters' Association. To hunt with the Descosiers requires a fat bank account, for a 21-day expedition costs an individual $1,575; a 30-day hunt, $2,250. During the two-month season (August and September), the Desrosiers each take out four hunters apiece per

Belle holds a government licence to hunt a vast area of 22,000 square miles in the Yu-kon's Glenlyon Mountains; Curly operates over 23,000 square miles in the Pelly Mountain range.

Veteran sportsmen from all over the world regard Belle as the best in the country at tracking down the big, white Fannin sheep of the Yukon.

At the age of 10, she started out working with her father thy then retired from the RNWMP' on his trap-lines; one year later she had shot her first sheep, bear and moose, When Belle was 13, she was already cook and horse-wrangier for her father. * * * In the city, Belle Desrosiers (she's called 'Belle of the Yu-kon' by admiring sportsmen) would pass as any other attractive suburban housewife. But out roaming her sprawling hunting territory, she's one of the best at her job in Canada.

Adds her proud husband: "As a guide, Belle has all the qualifications anyone could possibly require. She's also --cook."

But Stan Hiscock, chairman of the recently-appointed advisory planning commis-sion, says he sees no need for a municipal government for years to come.

Meanwhile, Municipal Affairs Minister Wesley Black headed for a neutral corner, saying the people will have to decide for themselves.

Esquimelt MLA Herbert Bruch told the Colonist that while formation of a munieipality or local district would certainly be desirable, "don't expect me to push for local government."

While others were choose ing sides, Mrs. Jean Boulter, chairman of the seven-member Langford recreation school students, he said. "But, these things are not possible until you get an organized area where you can assess the people . . . the only way to get something charge the people, then they will take an interest in it," he said.

The advisory planning commission which advises the minister of municipal affairs on over-all development in the area is "a step in the right direction. It is helping, but it is not the answer," Mr. Williams said. Mr. Hiscock said he feels that in the long run, amalgamation of Greater Victoria and the Langford-Metchosin area will be best for the region. rather than incorporation of this area as another piece in

Mr. Black told a Colonist reporter no pressure is being exerted towards turning th area into a municipality. "We don't want to cram anything down the people's throats." Mr. Bruch said: "I would not agree to seeing (local gov-ernment) pushed or forced, but if it is acceptable to the

The number of unfinished nouses in the area reflected a philosophy of "pay as you build" instead of the usual "pay after you build" system of mortgages—and the area 'fulfills a need for low-cost housing," the report stated.

$274,000 in Interior Land

Trio Set to Enjoy Pioneering Payoff

By KEN JOHNSON

Three pioneers-two men and a woman have settled in Victoria to enjoy a $274,000 fortune they have made selling land they bought at Prince George 40

The three partners, Clement Deykin and his wife, Maude, and their life-long friend Robert Bishop, recently sold 274 acres of land at Prince George which they bought in 1920 for $800. Mr. Deykin, 86, came to Canada about 60 years ago from Birmingham, England. He met his wife—also from England—in Vancouver and they married in 1912. After doing various jobs, including working as an auctioneer and a jeweler, Mr. Deykin decided to go north to Prince George.

There, he met Mr. Bishop, now 81, originally from Berkshire, England, and the pair decided to team up to buy land. "It was a real wilderness when we arrived at Prince George - then Fost George," recalls Mr. Deykin. "There was nothing except just a few old Indian trails. I often wondered why I bothered going there."

Together Mr. and Mrs. Deykin, and Mr. Bishop worked to build a high-class dairy, with about four to five employees. They worked the land and sold produce.

"But it was hard work all the time," said Mr. Deykin, "and 32 years ago we all three decided to retire and moved to Duncan. We rented the dairy to a couple of

Recently, the three pioneering partners decided to sell the land—and reaped $1,000 an acre for it. They now live at $20 Heywood Avenue, Victoria.

Plans for the future? "We may visit the Old Country, using the money we've made," said Mr. Deykin. "But mostly I aim to just relax and watch other people do the hard work."

Pipe Major of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) Cadet Pipe Band, Gordon Hamilton and Miss Denise Warholm will be taking part in the Scottish Country Dance competition.

Cheerful dancers of the Sailor's Hornpipe are Danny Costain and Cathy-Gower.

Little Cheryl Rafter quite obviously isn't a bit frightened of that shillelagh Duncan Conrad is using in a threatening manner. They will enter in Irish Jig competition.

Dancing and Piping at Highland Games

Victoria Highland Games Association annual indoor meet will be held next Saturday, Feb. 29, in the Club Sirocco.

Competition in dancing and piping will commence at 9:30 in the morning and will continue throughout the day.

Refreshments will be served and there will be a dance in the evening to wind up events.

Competitors will range in age from 4 years to about 18.

Dances will include such well-known numbers as the Highland Fling, The Sword Dance, Seann Truibhas, Irish Jig, Sailor's Hornpipe and Reel O'Tulloch.

The country dancing events will start about 4 o'clock and quadrille competitions will be held at 9 in the evening prior to public dancing. Both modern and old-time dancing will be on the evening program dancing will be on the evening program.

Judges will come from Vancouver and Buffalo, New York.

Arranged by Dorothy Wrotnowski Social Editor

Friday's the Day-Imperial the Place . . .

The vogue for winter white carries over into spring.

Colours are correct for business . . .

Scarcely a week goes by that we don't learn something new to add to our store of useful miscellaneous information ... the latest tibit has to do with male sartorial elegance ... and we acquired it from no leas an authority than one of the knowledgeable gentlemen in Wilson's men's haberdashery department ... Most of the men we know ... and we bet this eves for you too ... don white shirts every morning to go about their daily toil ... Not correct, say Wilson's: white shirts are for after-six wear ... Shirts in stripes, or pale plain colours are far smarter and absolutely "right" for business wear ... Which brings us to Wilson's new shipment of Hathaway shirts in muted double stripes ... blue, tan, green-and-white ... with soft, London Spread collars, French cuffs ... finest quality broadcloth ... Ditto in plain colours ... but all very subdued in tone—nothing bold or conspicuous ... And to wear with these elegant shirts, Christian Dior ties ... pure silk in a big range of colours and designs ... Only $8.30 these ... If you yearn to have a "man of distinction" in your home, suggest that he pay a visit to ... W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., EV 3-7177.

Have a slim brocade evening gown with coat to match.

New hair-setting method works wonders . . .

New: The covered-up look in swim suits.

We could have danced all night . . .

We went to a party last week ... at Arthur Murray School of Dancing ... and it was more fun than a picnic ... Participants were all students of the school ... mostly unattached ... various ages from young to getting-on-in-years ... all descing beautifully with each other, and with the teachers who jeined in the fun and performed introductions, where such were needed ... We learned that these student parties are regular features at Arthur Murray's ... and certainly the studio advertising relative to the fun to be found in dancing is no idle claim ... if, that is, you know the proper steps and can tackle the various dances confidently and happily ... The name Arthur Murray is practically synonymous with effective dancing teaching ... for one thing, they alone teach the "Magic Step" which is a point of departure for any dance you can name ... once you master it you're off to the races ... The local Murray studio is owned and operated by Victorian Gisele Van ... as delightful a gal as you could hope to meet ... and if you want to join in the studio fun ... or simply brush up on your dancing technique, we urge you to call her at ... Arthur Murray School of Dancing, 714 Yaten Street, EV 5-1476.

Gay hair ribbons or berets top Chanel's suits and coats.

Oleg Cassini comes to town . .

If, like un, you're an admirer of Mrs. Konnedy's beautiful, understated clothes ... you're familiar with the type of elegance exemplified by Oleg Cassini ... Now you can buy Cassini-designed dresses right here in Victoria ... at Miss Frith's, who have them enclusively ... Moreover, there's only one of a kind ... which means you don't have to go tootling off to Vancouver or Scattle to find something resilty different ... One of these Cassini dresses was the hit of the LODE. fashion show hast week ... A navy silk shantung sheath with rod band underlining the high empire bosom, and trickly little reversible cape ... navy one side, red the other ... Another stunner we saw is a beige silk sheath with shoestring straps ... filmy lace overblouse ... lined jacket, with beautifully detailed cross-over neckline ... size 14 ... Yet another is a navy and red print the silk with elasticized draw waist and cowi neckline, size 12 ... This looks simply terrific on ... as does the black and white silk tweed which comes in size 14 ... A levely blue, in size 16 too ... Admittedly, these dresses aren't inexpensive ... but when you own one you've really got something! ... Miss Frith Fashisms, 1617 Douglas president of White Cane Club

Boycott Unbroken

U.S. WHEAT

(From UPI, AP)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—U.S. government efforts to end a union boycott that has halted shipment of American wheat to Russia collapsed today.

Talks between U.S. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz and union leaders at Miami Beach were broken off Through a spokesman, Wirtz said they were unable to resolve the issue.

The secretary had tried to persuade the Maritime union officials to lift an ban on loading wheat aboard foreign ships bound for Russia by longshoremen in Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports.

Unions Fight Waivers

The unions are demanding that the U.S. government revoke waivers granted to Continental Grain Company allowing it to ship only 38 per cent of a 1,000,000-ton wheat sale in U.S. vessels. The labor leaders also demanded that no such waivers be granted in the future on shipments to Soviet-bloc nations. The Continental sale of wheat under an export licence granted by the commerce department is worth about $75,000,000.

May Never Leave Docks

Future grain shipments to Russia may even-tually total $400,000,000 but the longshoremen's boycutt could prevent it from ever leaving U.S. docks.

Only a small amount of the grain had been shipped by Continental before the boycott began. The first shipload arrived in Odessa Friday.

Wirtz postponed leaving here for Washington several times as the marathon negotiations to end the boycott continued,

Smoke Fells Firemen

VANCOUVER (CP) - More than a dozen city business firms in a business block were hit by a three-alarm fire Sat-

Two firemen were overcome by the heavy smoke pouring from the front and rear of the building and were taken to St. Paul's Hospital.

The dense smoke hampered efforts to determine the centre of the stubborn blaze. At one point the entire second storey of the block housing the Letter Shop and Pender Billiards was enveloped in smoke.

Firemen said the blaze broke out in Paragon Cleaners and that the other firms in the block suffered severe smoke

Nuclear-Free Zone Goal

LONDON (AP)-Harold Wilson said Saturday the labor government he expects to lead will work within the Atlantic alliance to try to establish a nuclear-free zone in central Europe.

Totems Win School Title

By JIM TAYLOR (Colonist Staff Reporter)

COURTENAY - Victoria High School Totems, brutal on the backboards and poised when it really counted, won the Colonist Cup and the Vancouver Island High School basketball championship here last night with a 44-39 victory over Courtenay Towhees.

It was a victory built around the superlative defensive play of Barney Spaven and Ron Stubbings, and it sent Totems into the B.C. tournament in Vancouver March 47 as the top club of a strong Island entry. Joining them there will be the second-place Towness, Oak Bay High, third after a 46 40 victory over Nanaimo Hub-sters, and Esquimalt Dockers, who grabbed the final spot by men, 53-45.

NOT FOR SURE

Strike Chief Explains Shipyard Pressures

By HARVEY SHEPHERD

Working conditions in the shipyards have contributed much to "pressure building up" among shipyard employees now on strike, says a leading union figure in the dispute.

James McConachy, Victoria business agent for the boilermakers' union, said last night the public is not aware of many of the factors which have led to the current strike.

Perhaps, he said, Victoria Chamber of Commerce president E. E. Pearlman and others who have called for a quick end to the strike should go down to the yards one morning during a cold spell and look at the toilets. with the water in the bowla covered with a film of ice.

On one occasion, he said, a septic tank in the yards overflowed for about a year before the unions succeeded in getting the company involved to the tank pumped out.

He said the unions have been fighting in vain for years to have lockers provided in which ahipyard workers could put their personal belongings.

He said he has seen shipyard workers laid off one afternoon and rehired the next morning. The unions aren't making an issue of the point, said Mr. Mc-Conachy, but shipyard workers have no coffee breaks.

"Working conditions are very important," he said. "The mes in the yards, they resent a lotof these things."

* And he said such faults in important," he said. "The men costly for the companies to He said unions should not have to fight for conditions which in many cases are already spelled out in existing

He agreed with a reporter's suggestion that working conditions are as important as wages in shipyard workers' thinking in the shipyards

Mr. Husband has been strongly criticized by officials of Burrard Dry Dock and the cities of North Vancouver and Vancouver for personally approaching federal government leaders to give the $10,000,000 weathership contract to VMD, despite the fact Burrard submitted a slightly lower tender on the contract. Mr. McConachy said the difference between the two tenders

amounts to less than one per cent of the contract price. He said he does not think Victoria has been getting its share of government contracts. In recent years, for instance, the federal government has had seven destroyer-escorts built on the west coast "and Victoria has had 2½ of them." he said.

The one-half ship, he said, was HMCS Fraser. Yarrow's in Victoria submitted the low tender on that ship, he said, but the hall for the Fraser was built at Burrard. Yarrow's is a subsidiary of Burrard. Similarly, he said. Yarrow's submitted the low tender on the icebreaker Camsel and Burrard built the hull. He said he had fought for the Camsel job to come to Victoria.

Burrard did all the loft work on the Pacific Naval Labora-tories ship now in the hands of Yarrow's, Mr. McConachy said. He suiff WHITE faces all the problems of bidding against two companies and Burrard and Yarrow's represent themselves

They stare down silently, like haughty members of a royal family-caribou, mountain goats, big horn and Fannin sheep.

Beneath them this week, Lougheed and two visitors from Whitehorse — Wilfred (Curly) Desrosiers, and his wife, Belle—sat and talked of hunting.

To most women, hunting is a male preserve—and hunting talk, perhaps, a bore. But for soft-spoken Belle Descosiers. it's her living. This Yukon-born daughter of a Northwest Mounted policeman is, at 43, Canada's only woman licensed outfitter and hunting guide.

She and her husband were on the last leg of a holiday in the United States and Canada, visiting their hunting clients.

Top Woman Hunting Guide Leads Sportsmen to Game

They left shortly afterward for their Whitehorse home. Lougheed's magnificent trophies once roamed the mountain country of the Yukon. and are reminders of his last four hunting expeditions with the Desrosiers.

Belle and Curly were mar-ried in 1945, and a few years later established their outfitting and guide business. They two of an even dozen guides registered with the Yukon Outfitters' Association. To hunt with the Desrosiers requires a fat bank account, for a 21-day expedition costs an individual $1,575; a 30-day hunt, $2,250. During the two-month season (August and September), the Desrosiers each take out four hunters apiece per Belle holds a government licence to hunt a vast area of 22,000 square miles in the Yu-Glenlyon Mountains; Curly operates over 23,000 square miles in the Pelly Mountain range.

Veteran sportsmen from all over the world regard Belle as the best in the country at tracking down the big, white Fannin sheep of the Yukon.

At the age of 10, she started out working with her father (by then retired from the NWMP) on his trap-lines: one year later she had shot her first sheep, bear and moose. When Belle was 13, she was aiready cook and horse-wrangier for her father, Tom Dickson, the Yukon's first licensed hunting guide, and a crack pistol and rifle marksman.

Belle already holds two record trophies — one, a Fannin sheep with a 46-inch horn (over 40 inches is considered a record), and a 1,400-pound polar Sear, which stood 11-feet, 10 inches, and was downed with one shot by Belle at Point Hope, Alaska.

* * * In the city, Belle Desrosters (she's called 'Belle of the Yu-kon' by admiring sportsmen) would pass as any other attractive suburban housewife. But out roaming her sprawling hunting territory, she's one of the best at her job in Canada.

Adds her proud husband: "As a guide, Belle has all the qualifications anyone could possibly require. She's also --cook."

$274,000 in Interior Land

Trio Set to Enjoy Pioneering Payoff

By KEN JOHNSON

Three pioneers two-men and a woman -have settled in Victoria to enjoy a 8274,000 fortune they have made selling land they bought at Prince George 40 years ago. The three partners, Clement Deykin and his wife, Maude, and their life-long friend Robert Bishop, recently sold 274 acres of land at Prince George which they bought in 1920 for $800. Mr. Deykin, 86, came to Canada about 60 years ago from Birmingham, England. He met his wife—also from England—in Vancouver and they married in 1912. After doing various jobs, including working as an auctioneer and a jeweler, Mr. Deykin decided to go north to Prince George.

There, he met Mr. Bishop, now 81, originally from Berkshire, England, and the pair decided to team up to buy land. "It was a real wilderness when we arrived at Prince George—then Fort George," recalls Mr. Deykin. "There was nothing except just a few old Indian trails. I often wondered why I bothered going there."

worked to build a high-class dairy, with about four to five employees. They worked the land and sold produce. * * *

"But it was hard work all the time," said Mr. Deykin, "and 32 years ago we all three decided to retire and moved to Duncan. We rented the dairy to a couple of our employees.

Recently, the three pioneering partners decided to sell the land—and resped $1,000 an acre for it. They now live at 920 Heywood Avenue, Victoria.

Plans for the future? "We may visit the Old Country, using the money we've made," said Mr. Deykin. "But mostly I aim to just relax and watch other people do the hard work."

After a Restful Pause in Uruguay.

In Argentina a sword can still settle a dispute! Cheaper than lawyers, duelling though officially outlawed, remains a socially-approved and fairly frequent practice. Jane, after a full day's struggle to clear two tiny parcels of children's Christmas presents from the medieval-minded customs authorities, plus a morning attempting, unsuccessfully, to send one simple package through the equally antiquated postal system, would cheerfully have challenged the lot to mortal combat. Her weapon-daggers!

South America's smallest and most progressive republic, 50 miles off across the River Plate, has been a welcome relief from huge, roaring, thrusting Buenos Aires, Despite its million inhabitants, a third of the entire population of the country, the little republic's capital, Montevideo, with its history of genuine, democratic government, is a gentle, friendly, well-mannered city. It's location is magnificent, with miles of sandy beaches that make it a combined metropolis and summer resort. To it and fashionable Punta del Este on the open Atlantic hordes of visitors swarm annually. The sun-bleached shoreline is a kalandioscopic pattern of colored sunshades ringed with chocolate bodies.

To all of us it was a joy to wallow in the warm see. But the thing Mandy will best remember is undoubtedly the fastastic number of hairdressing establishments devoted solely to children. Sitting in thrilled solemnity behind a plastic peny-head attached to the barber-chair, she's had her raggedy locks professionally clipped for the first time since we left

We can report, too, that this is the cleanest country we've encoun-tered in our present travels, Standards of living and education are the highest in South America. Industries are few; agriculture the nation's livelihood. Living costs, though increasingly astro nomic for Uruguayans, are at present mighty easy for those with dollars. Hotels a few blocks back from the beaches are reasonable . . . We found The Oxford a good bet. We've had many excellent meals for two, plus a bottle of wine, for a total of 85 cents. Try the La Picapiedra! with atrolling musicians for good measure. Good steaks cost 35 cents. The children have stuffed and stickled themselves with giant ice cream cones at a price you'd pay for a tiny one at home. And it's the only land we know where good wine, and plenty of it, costs less than a cup of coffee!

The Montevidean has one leg in his place of business, the other on the beach. Working hours are largely staggered and short. During the present summer months,

Thanks to an old friend, Loon Mayrand, Canada's amnamedor to Argentina, Paraguy and Uruguay, Argentina, Paraguy and Uruguay, our second day in Montevideo found us flying far out over the back country of the vant entite and shoop estancies. Our pilot was ranch owner, third generation Uruguayan Scotaman Jim Miller in his twin-engined Apache aircraft, one of two which constitute his private "Pan Criolia" airline. Any Canadian cattleman might cuvy his lush rangelands, interspersed with groves and windbreaks of trees, all man-planted. Their rate of growth is fantastic; up to 20 feet or more in a matter of four or five years.

Landing at Jim's La Vangu estancia was simust like coming home, with the modust comfort-able runch house, the friendly, inable ranch house, the frien formal do-it-yourself arms

Only here and eleawhere in Uruguay, in all South America with its rigid sense of "chas," have we seen the boad of the household and his family help with the do-mestic chores, or the boss showing the peons how to do a job by do-ing it himself. It was a refresh-ing change, even if the tropical vegetation shattered the B.C. sion when we went outside. Good country, this, with the best Herefords and Corriedale sheep seen, plus plenty of partridges and the odd South American co-Trout-like fish in the streams run to 20 pounds, are excellent eating and surprisingly full of fight for such warm and sluggish waters. There was a cattle round-up. The "Criolla" breed of horse used by the mounted peons for working the cattle impressed us; very similar to the North American "quarter-horse."

It was a pleasant, non-spectacular week and we were sorry to say goodbye to Uruguay. Flying the return trip to Buenos Aires by the little republic's efficient CAUSA

Mislaid para-ports added to our joys. The fun ended with a dash, on the edge of its closing hour to Paraguny's consulate. We'd been told Paraguny needed up-to-date health cer-tificates, police certificates and was as tough as the Iron Curtain.

TANGLE of the ISLES

Tangle? Why, seaweed of course, especially the kind known as kelp, which is thrown up on the beach in tangled coils after a storm. Strange-looking stuff! Some people, especially girls, find it somewhat revolting. "Looks like intestines." Others, especially small boys, delight in it and make whips from the long, thin stems. One of the popular names for it is "sea-whip."

Scientists, less emotional perhaps, have tried to make use of the thousands of tons of kelp available, but with only moderate success in most cases. Some years ago, a botanist at the University of Washington found a way of extracting the salt from the juicy stems and replacing it with sugar and coloring matter, which made a quite acceptable substitute for candied citron peel. He made candy, too, and sent samples to manufacturing confectioners, who ate up what he sent them and asked for more. But it never got off the ground as a commercial enterprize.

The Colonist for Aug. 9. 1959, said: "Victoria had a seaweed factory of its own in 1912. Kelp candy, artificially colored and flavored, and cut to resemble pieces of fruit, was sold in Victoria stores. The factory was begun in 1912 by a California businessman, Nick Clarke, who raised money for his scheme to harvest the kelp beds off Brotchie Ledge. One of the backers was the late James Lemon, of Lemon - Gonnason, the firm which was the forerunner of Crowe-Gonnason. The factory was established in a shed on the lumber firm's property. The plant also provided iodine and potassium from the kelp for sale to drug firms. But the factory apparently failed within a year and was closed down."

Kelp has long been used as a fertilizer and a prosperous local factory, Sidney Seaweed Products, ships many tons a year all over Canada and the United States and as far afield as New Zealand and Japan. Kelp as a fertilizer has definite advantages over others in that it contains a great variety trace minerals, as many as 50 more, and also trace organic sub stances but little understood as seeds or fungus perts

Derivation Unknown

The derivation of the name kelp is unknown but we do know that it was first applied, not to the sea-weed, but to the hard, fused cake left after burning the plants, which was a source of soda, used in the making of soap, glass, porcelain and other products. Later the name kelp was transferred to the seaweed itself.

Burning tangle was a source of revenue along the coasts of France. Ireland and Scotland for many centuries but in recent times cheaper and more effective ways developed and not much kelp is burned today. Nevertheless, kelp is a most efficient collector of iodine, one species containing from ten to twenty thousand times the concentration found in sea water. as well as gold and silver, though not, unfortunately perhaps, in paying quantities.

Naturally enough, the Indians living on the coast he knew all about kelp and, next to cedar, it may well have been one of the most extensively used plants. The Eskimos, too, knew of some of its uses, but beyond eating it in the spring occasionally, had but one other use for it, as far as I remember. They used the hollow stems to make a siphon to drain water out of their knowless which water out of their kayaks, which cannot be bailed conveniently be-cause of the skin decking. Further south, along the Alaska coast and perhaps elsewhere, when the Indians had learned how to make "hoocheno" or home brew, they discovered that the hollow keip stem made an excel-lent "worm" for their stills, which proves once again that necessity is indeed the mother of invention. The particular species of kelp mostly used is that known as brown kelp, bladder kelp, builthead kelp, sea onlon, or sea-ofter cabbage. The botanists call it cabbage. The botanists call it Nereocystis luctkeana. The plant grows from a holdfast at the bot-tom of the sea, a root-like object in appearance, but which is actually a mechanism for holding fast to the stones or bedrock. It grows in depths of from ten to fifteen fathoms and the stems, sometimes attain a length of a hundred feet.

A close relative, the glant kelp, has been known to grow to a thousand feet. From the holdfast, long thin stem rises to the sur-nce. It is to these blades that ne old music hall song refers:

"As soon as I touched my sea-weed,

I knew it was goin' to be dry." The reference is to the habit, that visitors to the sesside had, of taking home a piece of R to hang on the hat tree in the hall. hang on the hat tree in the man, hang on the hat tree in the man, and the dry, the seaweed felt dry and vice versa. Not as inaccurate a barometer as one might think!

Sea Sanctuary

Most ship captains keep well away from a bed of kelp, for its presence indicates shallow water with a possibility of further shoaling. In stormy weather, it's even more necessary to give kelp beds a wide berth but our beds beds a wide berth, but our beds a wide berth, but our local Indians had a better idea still. If the weather got so bad that even their amazingly seaworthy canoes were in trouble, they would make for a kelp bed, paddle into the middle of it and make a line fast to half a dozen strong kelp stems. The floating fronds did much to smooth the waves and here they could ride out the storm in perfect safety.

The lower part of the long stem is solid and the rest hollow. The Indians took lengths of the solid part to make fish lines. The Rev. James G. Swan, for many years a missionary on the west coast, described the art of making these lines in some detail. The Indians

DID LITTLE GUSTAVE BEAT WRIGHT BROTHE

Twitching his moustache nervously, the little inventor completed the final adjustment, inhaled deeply, and eased the throttles forward. Shaking violently, the contraption of silk, bamboo and piano wire rolled across the pasture and gained speed until it slowly rose from the grass.

Held fast by awe, his three companions watched the giant "bird" climb to an altitude of 40 feet and level off, then streak toward a stand of chestnut trees. Waving and shouting, they run after it.

But the pilot had sighted his danger and was trying desperately to change course. For sec-onds nothing happened. Then, within 200 yards of the threat, his craft veered to the side and he was safe.

In the few seconds of flight he had covered more than one-half mile and was running out of field. Shutting off the engine, he glided to a smooth landing, and was met by handshaking and back-slapping from his jubilant companions. For the first time in history man-had flown a powered aircraft!

Three more successful flights were made that day.

Thousands had tried, but it took two bril-

Thousands had tried, but it took two brilliant, stubborn brothers to success! brothers named not Wright, but Whitehead!
On Aug. 14, 1901, exactly two years, four months and three days before the Wrights flew at Kity Hawk, North Carolisa, these Bavarian immigrants flew at Bridgeport. Connecticut.
How could history be so mistaken and give the Wrights first flight credit? Nicholas Whitehead, 3510 Maplewood Road, knows the story. The aviation genius was his uncle, Gustava Whitehead. His father, John, assisted.

ONE OF THE WITNESSES to the spic flight of 1901 was the inte Richard Howell, older of the Bridgeport Herald. Four days later he printed the history-making event in his paper, not as a front-page news story, but as a feature in the Sunday supplement. But he did record it—as did other reputable newspapers, and the witnesses' sworn affidavits also exist technic.

Then why are Gustave and John Whitehead
Then why are Gustave and John Whitehead not given cre not given creat for ints achievement: Why are they still unknown? Perhaps it's because the public 63 years ago just could not accept the idea of man propelling himself through the air. Of course balloons, gliders and even man-carry-ing kites were common enough, but the results of the centuries-long experiments with those hardly inspired confidence. hardly inspired confidence

One of the most outspoken groups against aviation was the church, which believed that "If God wished man to fly He would have given him wings!

When the Wright brothers succeeded in fly-ing 120 feet in twelve seconds in 1903 they en-countered much the same public apathy.

STEPPING TO THE GROUND after making y, Gustave Whitehead's first reaction was as for a man of his exacting temperament build a better machine. Never one to rest on his laurela, he was already planning improve-ments. Within days he had the historic plane dismantled and parts of it incorporated into an-other aircraft—which he intended to land on which would assure them obscurity.

Strangely, like everyone else, the White-heads did not seem to realize that they had made history. It was this very selfleamess which would assure them obscurity.

Five months later, Whitehead's anapiana, christened simply No. 22, was completed. With two assistants, he towed the ungainly craft to a hill overlooking Long Island Sound. It resembled just what it was — a rowbont with wings. Remarkably, it flew two miles. After refuelling, Whitehead crossed the sound. On both flights he practised making aerial turns and landing in the sea.

Both his planes had realized a speed of 20.

WHILE THE WHITEHEADS continued to experiment in obscurity, the Wrights had made themselves widely known through imaginative promotion. Within a short period they had interested European nations and the U.S. Army in their work. As they became widely acclaimed, the public simply accepted as fact the claim that they had been the first to fly. During the First World War the airplane came of age and they were assured a prominent position in history.

In 1937, authoress Stella Randolph collected In 1837, authoress Stella Randolph collected all available documentary and photographic evidence which she published in the small book "The Lost Flights of Gustave Whitehead." Included were 13 signed and witnessed affidavits attesting to the validity of Whitehead's feats. Unfortunately it was not enough to change what had become accepted as history.

The most incredible fact in Stella Randolph's

The most incredible fact in Stella Randolph's The most incredible fact in Steria reancoips a unique book is evidence to the effect that Whitehead flew a two-man, steam-powered airplane in 1899! However, because the flight ended in tragedy (it crashed and the co-pilot was neverly acaded by the ruptured boilers) and accounts of witnesses are rather vague, this cannot be verified.

However, there is no question that he did fly in 1901.

Gustave Whitehead made many other firsts in aviation history. His planes were constructed of aluminum and silk, neither of which came into general use for many years, and they were equipped with power-driven wheels tone engine drove the plane along the ground and another turned the propellers), whereas the Wrights and others launched their craft from a monorall track. erail track.

Whitehead built the first concrete runway and invented his two cooling system for his two-cycle calcium-cartide engines, Perhaps his most important contribution was his adaption of the "puller" type propeller, rather than the "pusher" type used by other pioneers. His principle remains unchanged in piston-engined alreraft today.

Whitehead also becam avascimenting with Whitehead also began experimenting with helicopters and actually constructed one, but it is not known if he ever got it into the air.

It is not known if he ever got it into the air. It is believed by some that Whitehead actually gave much information to the Wrighta, Always short of money to continue his experiments, he let it be known that he could use financial aid. Hearing of the German w.zard's problem, the Wrights are supposed to have visited him in 1902. Perhaps foolishly, Whitehead apparently told them everything he knew. After that they had nothing more to do with him. It is not unlikely that they incorporated his ideas into their own designs. It has also been intimated that the Wrights had been ready to admit defeat because of

had been ready to admit defeat because of recurrent failures until they met another genius of Whitehead's lik, George A. Spratt. Like Whitehead, he, too, gave all his secrets to the bicycle makers from Ohio. Again, with Whitehead, they never acknowledged with Whitehead, they never acknowledged his contribution. Although they are credited in all encyclopedias with creating the wind tunnel, an invaluable device for testing aircraft designs, it was Dr. Spratt who invented it.

But the Wrights' contribution to aviation cannot be denied. Where the dreamers like Whitehead and Spratt left off, they carried on, giving the airplane practicability and a future.

They were the Henry Ford and Thomas Edison of aviation

Gustave Whitehead, broke and perhaps dis appointed, continued to experiment in his small weekshop until his death in 1924 1924: Brother John worked in Bridgeport for some years after their historic flight, then came to B.C. seeking gold in 1911. Asked about his father and uncle, Mr. Whitehead said, "My father never mentioned it. I guess he was disappointed, but I guess he figured the better men won," so he didn't do anything about it. They were new to that country (U.S.) and weren't too familiar with the rules.

It's a good many years now since the late B.C. Police Commissioner Tom Parsons (then an inspector) introduced me one day to his friend, Stephen Raymer. Steve was then on a Vancouver news paper, and I presume had casually dropped in to pay his respects at headquarters. With his briefcase and Homburg-type hat, I noticed also his breezy erudition was coupled with a hint of something foreign.

Later, when I knew him better, I developed an interest not only for the scope of his mind but also for some of the more fascinating details of his nimble and mysterious past.

Though he seldom made reference to his hirthplace or early upbringing, undoubtedly they were strong factors in shaping his character; for he had a Baikan background that obviously destined him to be a character out of an Edgar Wallace thriller. On the shortest requisitance, you were somehow aware that of an Edgar Wallace thriller. On the shortest acquaintance you were somehow aware that Steve Raymer was really the secret agent on the Orient Express, the mysterious Mr. X who exchanged the matching briefcase with some unfortunate courier, or who tracked down that master spy Professor Hugo Toepfel! Fundiyenough, he had done these things! On one occasion during the First World War he did exchange briefcases with a German agent, and he actually did help in tracking down a Professor Hugo Toepfel!

To say briefly that he was born in 1877 in Zagreb, Croatia, fails to give full understanding of what made Sieve tick. For Stephanon E. Remos (as he was christened) came of a minority race whose country, for 1100 years, had known nothing but foreign rule. First it was the Hungarians, then the Turks then they were the Hungarians, then the Turks, then they were lumped into the Austrian-Hungarian Empire, and when that crumbled, the Italians took over. And finally along came the Germans. Today it's one of the six independent republics of Yugoslavia.

Thus it happened that, when 33 years eld, Steve landed in Vancouver in 1910. Though he was legally a subject of Austria, like most of his fellow Crestians he couldn't care less. He could remember when he and a group of his fellow university students tried for a commis-sion in the Austrian navy, and were all turned sion in the Austrian navy, and were all turned down. Steve went as spokesman to Vienna only to be told in veiled terms that it wasn't the policy to have too many Croatian officers in the navy. Something about his approach, however, appealed to the Navy brass, and he was promptly given a job in the embassy at Madrid.

He Knew Secrets

With his sort of dual allegiance, the summer of 1914 found Stephen Raymer, legally an Austrian reservist, working for Canada's immigra-tion service. Seems he was discreetly filling them in on the coded secrets of Rumanian-born Baron Groedel, the Austro-Hungarian consul in Vancouver's Birks Building! The arrangement kept Immigration Inspector Malcolm Reid abreast of the whys and wherefores of the Komagata Maru's embarrassing visit to Burrard Inlet in July, 1914. Unknown to most, it was a plan engineered in Germany to help spread dissaffection in India, because of the vessel's 350 east Indian passengers being refused a landing in Vancouver. Though there were riots in India as a result, still a million and a half Indians served in the Allied cause in the war that broke out a month later.

Among his many talents, Steve had a re-markable faculty for mastering foreign lan-guages. He was fluent in at least 12, and I know on one programs (when he are 12) know on one occasion (when he acted as court interpreter) he made himself understood in six different tongues in the same case! His mastery of Latin was remarkable; he spoke it conversa-tionally, like English.

tionally, like English.

Though the outbreak of war in August, 1914, put Steve more in Canada's official picture, it wasn't until the summer of 1915 that he got the opportunity to show what he could do. By then, accompanying the trench warfare in Europe, was the problem of munitions and supply ever the world's oceans. Though the neutral United States was technically a market place for belligerents, Britsin's sea power made it available only to the Allies. Germany's two-fold answer was submarine warfare and a skilful campaign of subotage in North America. German agents slipped time bombs aboard cargo vessels, and explosions occurred with alarming regularity in munition plants and dumps; by May, 1915, hardly a day went by without an explosion being touched off somewhere.

The Antagonists

While the German Embassy in Washington had over-all control of the spy network, the consul-general in San Francisco co-ordinated efforts on the Pacific Const. Pitted against his secretive campaign aimed at ships, docks and wharves from San Diego to Seattle were U.S. marshals and sheriffs, Burns and Pinkerton detectives, and the intelligence work of British consular agents. consular agents.

The Puget Sound dock area had its share of fires and explosions, until there grew up definite suspicion in the minds of the consulates at Scattle and Tacoma that the master mind at work was somehow linked with British Columbia. As an inkling of this reached Vancouver, the master mind struck again.

ver, the master mind struck again.

It was about 2 a.m. on Sunday morning, May 30, 1915, that the murky stillness of Seattle's Eliott Bay was suddenly riven with a blinding sheet of light followed by a thunder-ous explosion. In one awesome moment a scow loaded with 15 tons of dynamits, awaiting shipment to Vladivostock, completely vanished, along with an aged watchman who could only be recalled as "Pats."

So skillni was the shotour was the s

So skilful was the anbeteur's work that Burns detectives on guard duty and a patrol boat circling the scow periodically saw nothing amiss. The explosion did more than demolish the scow, for not only was it heard for 50 miles around but in addition broke practically every down-town store window in Seattle, and some as far off as Everett and Bremerton.

Mysterious Mr. X

Just prior to the blast, British Vice-Consul Agassiz at Tacoma had been working almost night and day to successfully foil another plot (to blow up the Kaifufu Maru loading ammunition for Russia) in the course of which investigation he had come up with a strong lead that pointed to a mysterious Mr. X, who had recently been in Canada.

It so happened that about the same time Steve Raymer in Vancouver had run into something interesting. A couple of homesteaders of German origin located close to the border town of Blaine were undoubtedly assisting German sympathizers across the line; and from the information he had picked up, two of the more recent transients were more than sympathizers. They were a couple of German ex-officers.

Agassiz' information from Tacoma got quick analysis by immigration chief Malcolm R. J. Reid, district chief Tom Smith of the B.C. Police, and Raymer. No doubt about it, the man Agassiz had in mind was one of the German officers who had worked for a few days as a farm hand near Blaine, then slipped through the bush trail under cover of darkness.

More concrete information was furnished to Tacoma, and then, to block up the back door Tucoma, and then, to block up the back door escape route, Steve Raymer suddenly became a German reservist anxious to reach San Francisco to put himself at the service of the consulgeneral. He made the grade without arousing suspicion, was passed from one farm to the other, and finally when he negotiated the secret route to Blaine, a square of immigration and Provincial Police officers descended on two farms and picked up the men involved.

Treason Charge

The hefty charge of "treason" was laid, almost a rarity since the days of Louis Riel, but it was later dropped in favor of a lesser charge. At the trial Steve Raymer, of course, was the Crown's star witness, and it was in the cross-examination that defence counsel "Fighting Jee" Martin occasionally met his match. An example was when Martin anapped.

"Why did you take up this kind of work?" Well, anyway," said Steve, "it wasn't for ney. I'm not being paid."

"Why, then, did you do it?" pursued Martin. "For no other reason," said Raymer, "than prove my loyalty to Canada. I hope one day become naturalized."

Joe eyed him for a second or two, then in a rather secoring tone asked:

"You were told to represent yourself as an alien enemy, weren't you?"

"Excuse me," said Raymer, "not to 'repre-sent' myself as one; I am an alien enemy!"

His odd answer was true; by a strange freak of international law, he was a subject of Austria, while at the very moment his Croatian homeland was being bettered by German forces under General von Mackensen, headed for Constantinople! Stranger still was the fact that up to recently von Mackensen's brother had lived the life of a country squire at Port Kells, not far from New Westminster.

End of an Agent

It was as a result of Steve Raymer's information that Vice-Consul Agassiz managed, after six weeks of intensive investigation, to finally corner the man responsible for the Seattle harman res corner the man responsible for the Seattle har-bor blast. However, as he and a Pierce County sheriff harnmered at the door of the master spy's final hideout, a muffled shot was heard from within. When they broke in the door he was lying on the floor, a bullet through his brain. He was later identified as Emil Marksz, alias Professor Hugo Toepfel, alias G. S. Denz. Soon after hostilities ceased, Agassiz left the consular service to come to British Colum-bia, and in the early twenties served with the bla, and in the early twenties served with the B.C. Provincial Police at Sidney, Cumberland, Vancouver and Victoria.

He was an onlooker at the Versailles Peace Conference, and on another trip had a meeting with General von Hindenburg, then president of the German Republic. On another occasion, at the outbreak of war in 1939, Weir had his office radio tuned to one of Hitler's ranting speeches. He thought it would interest Steve, so invited him to listen, "Good God!" said Steve in sudden annoyance. "What horrible German that man speaks!"
Gay, charming and talented, sometimes a man of mystery, Steve Raymer was 82 when he passed away in May, 1959. By coincidence, the 44th anniversary of the famous Seattle blast,

Muriel Wilson's Thought for Food

Since returning from the Sunkist citrus groves of California and Arizona I have been sorting out recipes collected while on our trip. Some are specialties of hotels and resorts where we ate, some are from the growers' kitchens and some were gleaned from companions on the tour.

No matter how much a woman loves to cook she always appreciates a vacation away from her own kitchen. She loves to eat food prepared by someone else, she loves to sit down to a table not knowing what is going to be on the menu. This doesn't mean that she does not want to think or talk about food. The woman interested in food will talk about it at the drop of a hat.

Food editors and writers are no exception to this rule . . . When a group of these people gets together, what do you think they talk about? Why food, of course . . . East coast recipes are swapped for west coast recipes. Food trends and new products are lively topics of conversation. During our visit, citrus fruit recipes had top priority, naturally.

In both California and Arisona thousands of scree of desert have been made fertile by irrigation. Where there are water and sun, fruit grows... Here in the reclaimed desert, oranges, lemona, grapefruit and tangerines flourish. Professional cooks and homemakers in this land of lemons, grapefruit and tangerines flourish. Pro-fessional cooks and homemakers is this land of sunshine use these fruits in many ways. Here then are some of the recipes I brought back . . .

This pie is simple to make for a family meal or elegant, too, for a party.

At a luncheon served on a sun-drenched patio near the Salton Sea, California, we enjoyed a de-licious desert salad. You may have to alter some of the ingredients, for the recipe calls for three different varieties of tangerines. I believe only one variety (the small Dancy tangerine) is available here. However, you can substitute the other two varieties with white grapefruit and navel oranges. I will give you the recipe just as it is.

An intriguing hors d'oeuvres was served at the socktail hour at this hotel. You might like to try it at your next party. Wrap whole pitted dates with half slices of bacon. Secure with pick and broil. Serve hot from a chaf-ing dish. These are really good. Make lots of them.

One of the experiences common to mankind-when the years have accumulated-is that backward look which notes the point at which some minor circumstance, some casual decision of yea or nay, has influenced all that followed . . . has even, perhaps, altered completely the course of the life involved.

Thus it was with George E. Vantrin, French chef extraordinary, who, retired now, lives with his Belgian-born wife, Erna, at 486 Culduthel Avenue. In his case, the abrupt change of direction was brought about by an impulsive and quick-tempered Papa. The French are like

The Diners Might Be Surprised to Know Some of the

The Vautrin family lived, nearly 60 years age, in a small village named Chatel St. Ger-main—five of them, mother, father, and three children, one of them George. The senior Vau-trin was a machine-tool maker, whose gear was used for the construction of wire of all types. He travelled, when necessary, to supervise the installation of the machinery, and on this par-ticular occasion he went to London. Here, window-shopping one day along that city's noted Bond Street, he new some embroidery behind a speciality shop's plate glass.

Now it happened that emercidery, as well as barbed wire, was something M. Vautrin knew about. All his feminine relatives, and there were many of them, had done beautiful hand embroidery for generations, and all of it, he considered, was infinitely better than this! This, he decided, was rubbish. It annoyed him. His, women would accorn such work! Promptly he murched into the shop and told them so.

Not that he spoke English. He didn't. But he certainly managed to make himself understood! And presently an interpreter was unearthed who, it seems, presented such an teresting case for better embroideries to the manager of the Bond Street boutique that an agreement was reached. If M. Vautrin could produce more beautiful and finished work in France, let him get on with it. Bond Street would be most happy to see it.

That was enough for the Frenchman. He went home and sent some of his family's work to London. They took it instantly and asked for more. Lots more. Whereupon M. Vautrin dropped his machine tools without further ado collected his aunts his sisters his sisters inhw and his cousins ('whom he reckoned up by dozens'), and with his own immediate family, established them in the embroidery business in London. Thus was the stage set for George. This was in 1906.

The French embroidery was undentably ex. "2 quisite as Buckingham Palace duly discovered, as well as many another residence of note. On one occasion, for immance, an order came in for some rather special work, a crown and initials, to be done on several pairs of extremely personal garments for Her Majesty Queen Mary! Flannelette, they were, and all hand made! This royal commission was executed by Madame Vautrin, George's mother, ho, incidentally, lives now, at the age of 86. at Cordova Bay, and who, as recently as the visit of His Majesty George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Victoria some years ago, embroi-dered the Irish linen for Government House

The small George of those bygone years, however, was not concerned with embroidery. In fact he had been left in France for a time with grand-parents, and even when he eventu-ally rejoined the family in London he rather upset his father by a complete indifference to fancy-work. He thought it was strictly for women. What did catch at his imagination, however, was the vocation of three of his father's London friends, one of whom was a chef to Queen Alexander, a second manager of the kitchens of a famous private club, and third in the same type of work for a large delicatessen. Consequently, when these three visitors congregated at the Vautrin home they brought delectable samples of cookery, and there was much talk of good food and its preparation. And so George decided that he wanted to learn to be a chef.

Father Vautrin was not pleased. And, though he was coaxed into agreeing tentatively to the idea, he instigated some under-cover perations designed to change the boy's mind. He let him go to the Savoy Hotel to serve an apprenticeship, but arranged that his son should be given all the kitchen's dirtiest jobs. This might or might not have worked but for the fact that fate intervened in the form of the head chef, who informed the elder Vautrin that his son had unique talents in the line of cookery, talents which should be given a fair And that was that. From the Savoy the young cook, now fluent in Cockney Eng-lish, went to the Carlton Hotel, where famous chef Auguste Encoffer agreed that the "help" was more than ordinarily gifted. After that came a term at the Langham Hotel where, at the age of 20, he was head of his department, specializing in fancy dishes and ornamental excess and company of the contraction of the c ment, specializing in fancy dishus and orna-mental centre-pieces, with a staff of 14 under him. He was well away.

An odd experience during this period re-sulted in his coming into possession of two ancient French books on classical cooking which today may well be unique and valuable. On a bitter day in February a half-frozen delivery man turned up in the hotel kitchen with a loud of Billingsgate fish. George, busy con-cocting an ornere table decoration, was sorry for the man and offered him a cup of hot coffee, laced with brandy. In gratitude, and noting the food aculpture going on, the fish man remarked to the chef that he had at home two old books which had been left with him by a former lodger. They seemed to be about cookery, and maybe the chef would like to have them. The chef assuredly would. He has them to this day.

By VIVIENNE CHADWICK

Compiled by a cook and writer named Dubois, they are tomes. Large and thick. One, with its recipes and designs, has scores of steel engravings of table centre-pieces carved from suet, rice, sugar, and all sorts of other edible materials. There are groups embodying angels, horses, scrolls, bulls, cherubs, each one a piece of sculpture which would take, aid George Vautrin, long weeks to complete second volume features nationally famous banquets of the past, menus which had been served on different occasions to most of the royalty of the world—the Kings and Queens of England, Prussia, France, Spain, Turkey. Denmark, and so on

In the course of his career in many lands George Vautrin Itas had some interesting encounters. He remembers an episode at the Savoy when a poor carbon copy of an order sent down from a suite on the fifth floor re suited in an omission which resulted again in a vociferous argument between the waiter upstairs and the kitchen staff below. George, the son of his father, flew upstairs and let e a blast at the waiter—at which a voice hethind him remarked amusedly, "Well, well! I haven't heard that nort of language for years!" And the Duc d'Orleans, immaculately turned out and sporting beard, moustachios, and carnation in buttonhole, tactfully with-

London, at the opening of the BBC, which was attended by King George and Queen Mary, the young chef had been responsible for the piece-de-resistance, a four-foot display which had taken him months to prepare. The royal couple admired this, accepted small pertions of food, and left . . . and in a matter of moments the centrepiece was completely demolished by souvenir-hunters!

The artistry required by these concoctions became George Vautrin's specialty, and developed with the years. It was necessary, he found, to be a sculptor, a designer, a painter, only with materials pertaining to food, instead of oils or water-colors. Or embroidery silks! As time went by he won a whole roll of diplomas and several boxes of medals for his fancy creations displayed in the annual exhibitions presented by the International Food and Cookery Association, in which all coun-tries entered the work of their finest chefs. His became noted for their intricacy and originality-basket of sculptured fruit: a great butterfly made from three cooked salmon, perfect in every detail and with antennae made from lobster feelers; amusing human faces drawn on the pale bodies of cooked turkeys, hair of shredded coconut; and numbers of edifices carved out of enormous blocks of ice, which necessitated long, cold hours of carving in apecial cold rooms.

During his rise to fame with these of deavors he won, also, a wife! This was in London, and one of the cash prizes he was awarded for the creation of a lady in a crino--fan, rose, rosebuds on the full skirt, piled coiffure and all, made, believe it or not, from a ham-bought his own lady her first fur

After years in London the couple went to Jamaica, where the government had opened up a new hotel, and following some 12 months there, Chief Vautrin got in touch with Canada's CPR, whose management snapped him up for its own string of hotels across the Dominion, One of these, of course, was the Empress. Eventually they both got weary of living in kitchens, including that of Buckingham Palace, to which he went on a visit. A tremendous room, he recalls, at a guess 160 feet by 60! Stuffed animal heads decorated the walls, he room, he recalls, at a guess 160 feet says (one wonders why?), and there were huge oak work tables, a do oak work tables, a dozen stoven, a huge And the precision drill which insures food for the royal banquets being served piping hot and with despatch, by long files numbered footmen, has, he says, to be seen to be believed

In the matter of kitchens, M. Vautrin remarks reminiscently, some startling bloomers occasionally show up in the building. Ice cream machines, for instance, cosy alongside the stoves. And, in the case of a certain large prairie city here in Canada, an incredible faux s was revealed when a brand new milliondollar hotel was actually up before it was discovered that somehow no kitchen at all had been included in the plans! He swears this is true, and the architects, scarlet with embarrassment, had hastily to convert an area intended for something quite different into a kitchen! Wherefore it is perhaps kinder not to inquire further

Inside the kitchens, too, idiocies develop. M. Vautrin remembers a simple little order for two soft-boiled eggs . . . which order re-mained unfulfilled for such a long time that a furious waiter, egged on no doubt by an even more furious customer, discovered that some bright scullery flunkey had set on the stove a two-gallon pot full of cold water, and

It Takes Enthusiastic and Level-Headed Men to Guard and Guide

The CRADLE of the GAME

"Although the televised National Hockey League games are exciting to watch, and display the sport at its professional best, they are a detriment to minor league coaching," claims Norman K. Jones, head coach of the minors in Esquimalt.

The youngsters, says their head coach, are all avid hockey fans and have their favorite players, whom they follow closely in the daily sports pages. On Saturday and Wednesday evenings they watch their idols in action on the television screen. The trouble begins when the boys try to practise some of the professional tactics in their minor league games.

"Our aim in minor hockey is to give the lads a chance to enjoy playing hockey strictly as a game, and maybe develop to some extent any hockey talent a young-ster may possess," said Norman. "Any rough play is out. We have no good penalties' in this league."

Safety is a key factor, and chance of injury is kept to an absolute minimum. The wearing of helmets by all players is mandatory, and the goalkeepers must use face masks. As a further protection, any form of checking based on body contact is prohibited. If a player's temper lends him to let fly with his fists he mediately removed from the game. use of the slap-shot, which could cause injury, especially among the larger boys if they arei-dentally became the target, is discouraged,

"The slap-shot is one of the toughest things "The slap-shot is one of the toughest things to make the younger players forget. There are only a few professionals who can deliver regularly with this type of shooting. Bobby Hull of the Chicago Black Hawks happens to be one of the masters—and what boy does not want to be another Mr. Hull," says Norman. "To watch a seven-year-old take a whack at the puck, only to miss by a country mile, and have his momentum almost corkscrew him into the ice indicates how the youngsters will into the ice indicates how the youngsters will try imitating the actions of the super-stars."

One form of imitating has been firmly stamped out. There is no arguing with the referee! To allow a young player of the fourth grade to question adult authority is unthinkable. For aside from teaching the fundamentals of hockey, the practice of good citizenship is given top priority in the league rulings. The boys are expected to respect their elders. They address the men working with them either by the proper names or as "sir."

Being the head coach of a minor league as its laughs as well as its frustrations, as Norman Jones of Esquimalt, and George "Fergie" McPherson the chief coach of Vic-toria's minor hockey both can attest.

oth men, working under the executives Both men, working under the executives of their respective leagues, are responsible for some 40 coaches plus a half-dozen divisional managers. This calls for approximately 15 hours weekly at the rinks. Their private telephones are tied up for lengthy periods by discussion of the many and varied problems encountered in a venture where more than untered in a venture where more than 500 boys are involved.

"Parents telephone me with all kinds of suggestions and requests," said Coach Jones. "One lady wanted to know why her boy, who was his team's top scorer last season, was not on the same team this year. She had forgotten her lad had aged a year and was now playing in an older age group."

Calls are received requesting boys be placed on certain teams to solve transportation prob-lems, but this is not always possible. Others want the schedules changed to conform to the home meal hours. The many requests and complaints, plus the authentic hockey business, can make the end of a season appear very inviting to a head coach.

The boya are divided up according to their ages into divisions; Pee-Wee Pups, 7.9; Pee-Wees, 10-11; Bantams, 12-13; Midgets, 14-16; and Juveniles to 18 years of age.

Each team of a division has 16 players. The teams are then made up with three separate shifts placing the most skilful players on the first, second and third lines respectively. This is done to balance a game. First lines will play first lines, and seconds will go against seconds. If this practice is adhered to, all players on the ice at any one time will be of approximately the same hockey calibre. "But human nature being what it is," said Norm Jones, "sometimes a coach will get carried away with the thoughts of winning a game, and will try to slip some of his best players in against his opponents' third line players in against his opponents' third line in order to get a couple of insurance goals. This is one of the reasons a head coach is required to put in an much time at rinkside."

Many parents, who played their hockey and did their skating maybe 25 years ago, still believe skates should be worn at least one, if not two sizes, larger than necessary. This may be perfectly good reasoning in a place where there is an abundance of natural ice, and a boy, besides needing to keep his feet warm, can take the time to strengthen his ankles by constantly skating on free ice. In Victoria, where a boy's ice time is limited due to the cost and the availability of artificial ice, he has to learn to skate in a shorter period of time. To accomplish this his skates must of time. To accomplish this his skates must fit properly. This does not call for brand new skates every year. In many of the sporting goods stores they carry an excellent stock of trade-in skates which will fill the bill.

The minor leagues in this vicinity are for-turate to have two men of the calibre of

Norman Jones, and "Fergie" McPherson do-nating so much of their leisure time to head the coaching staffs. Both men were outstand-ing players themselves and have kept them-selves well informed as to any changes which selves well informed as to any changes which have taken place in hockey over the years.

Last summer they attended the Hockey Coaching Institute held at the University of Alberta in Edmonton for two weeks. They studied "on-the-ice problems" which they could expect to crop up among the different are groups of boys; hockey management, afficiating, hockey injuries, and how to handle contrary parents. The boys seldom give the trouble. It is the over-enthusiastic parents who are the hardest to handle.

Recently Minor Hockey Night was held across Canada. Normally the youngsters play their games before an empty arena, but for this one night the country's pint-sized hockey talent played their hearts out before audiences of parents and grandparents. Here the games

And crisis arise! Every housewife understands this—but a threat of disaster is infinitely increased when a banquet for several hundred people is involved. As at Banff, once, when 480 guests sat expecting roast beef, until the horrid truth dawned that the meat was still in the fridge! Promptly every other joint in the kitchen that could be heated in a hurry was tossed into the ovens, and tragedy was averted.

Another such threat loomed when a large party, for whom cold salmon stood ready to serve, suddenly decided that in view of an abrupt change in the weather they would all prefer their fish hot! So all the salad accompaniments had to be removed, the whole salmon on their big platters had to be hastily cut up, heated, and served smoking . . . complete with wholly credible brown grill-marks, sneakily applied at the last minute!

In fact, says the now happily retired chef, a career in the famous kitchens of the world is fraught with danger. One has to be quickwitted, resourceful, and prepared to make split-second decisions. Wherefore he is more than content that today his only responsibilities are relatively minor ones, involved with his current work as janitor in the Legislative Buildings. (Although it tickles him that some times he is required to translate French docu-menta!) But nobody expects him to do the impossible fast. He likes that.

Impossible fast. He likes that.

His hobby is oil painting, and this, he says, is part and parcel of his past work in decorating and designing. Certainly he is an artist, and the several paintings which hang in the Vautrin home display his understanding of color and its application. He and his wife are a talented pair, friendly and out-giving. They both speak several languages, and she holds classes in French conversation. She is proud of her husband and his successful career, and has more than once, they both adcareer, and has more than once, they both admitted, got herself into trouble by promising friends that he will cook for a party, or bake a birthday cake, on his day off.

JAMES K. NESBITT Raises His Voice . . .

Are We Squandering

One often wonders if the members of our legislature—and the government—are fully aware of the historical value of our Parliament Buildings. Sometimes I doubt this; so many of our MLAs come from out of the province, and so many of them are young fellows that I don't suppose they are too conscious yet of our exciting history and the necessity of preserving its milstones.

The way our Parliament Buildings are being chopped up and hacked at pains me. Somebody or other gets an idea, and out goes everything old and in come all the shining, unnecessary gadgets of the modern age. Mind you, I'm not against progress, and change must come. But surely we can take care of what few historic monuments we have-and our Parliament Buildings are certainly among our treas-

What has happened to the lagislative chamber itself is monstreas. The old lights—perfectly good—were taken away, and in came new ones, just because Mr. Speaker so-and-so wanted something to do. Magnificent old rugs have been hauled away in perfect condition, merely because somebody or other had a whim. I know of one Mr. Speaker who threw out of the Speaker's suite a beautiful, historic, kidney-shaped mahogany table and brought in a glearning horror. Fortunately, Clerk of the House Ned de Beck saved the old table.

"Speakers come and go," said Mr. de Beck.

Mouse Ned de Beck saved the out table.

"Speakers come and go," said Mr. de Beck, hoping that one day that table would be back in the Speaker's suite. He has a proper appreciation of history, and so he keeps the table in his office. The Mr. Speaker in this instance was prepared to give the table to me. Mr. de Beck said he'd do anything for me, but that over his dead body that table would get out of the Parliament Buildings. I was disappointed, at first, because Ned was so stern; but now I am glad. pointed, at first, he but now I am glad,

What we need is some kind of Public Build-es Commission that must be consulted bee anybody—even such august personages as inet ministers—are allowed to chop and up. Even the First Lady of the United tear up. Even the First Lady of the United States is not allowed to touch the public rooms of the White House without approval of the Fine Arts Commission.

We have a priceless physical heritage in our Parliament Buildings, yet I know a lot of these Johnny-come-latelys we have in our legislature couldn't care less. I know some of them would like to tear those buildings down and put up new ones.

In recent days I've been delving into some of the history of these buildings, this heart and home of British Columbia. All sorts of strange things have happened there. This present government is not the only one that has been parsimonious where our buildings are concerned. In the 1880's the government that were putfing the buildings the put grows and the concerned. are concerned. In the 1880 the government that was putting the buildings up nearly drove architect Frank M. Rattenbury out of his mind. That government gave him the go-ahead, and then, the next year, it decided to pinch pennies, and so Rattenbury was forced, here and there, to put in dummy marble pillars.

1893 Beginning

The Parliament Buildings were started in 1893 and the first session in them was in February of 1898. Two years before, Captain Vancouver was put up on the dome, The Culonist noting: "The fine copper figure . . . is now in position on top of the great dome . . . The figure itself is seven feet six inches high, or 10 feet to the top of the staff of the flag he helds in his hand. Resplendent in a conting of gold-leaf, the glittering figure of the great discoverer makes a fitting object to crown the capitol buildings. He stands 127 feet over the ground on the roof of the cupola and the

had plans to order marble and bronze busts of noted British Columbians for these niches, but likely the governs of the day said it had no money for what it probably called extravagances. And so the niches have remained great gaping holes, just as if we'd had blanks in our appearance will be even more effective when the small columns which will join the cupola to the dome are placed in position."

A few nights later the government gave a dinner to all the workmen who had been engaged on the job—though it was far from complete. The Colonist gave the details: "With a good old English custom that might with advantage be more frequently adopted in Candal the provincial covernment. ada, the provincial government . . . marked completion of atone work of the new Parliament Buildings by entertaining at dinner all those who had been employed upon the work. This kindly custom is in general use in the Old Country and serves to show that the relations between workmen, the contractors and the employers are not solely a matter of so many dollars and cents.

"The banquet was held at the Mount Baker Hotel. Mr. John Virtue, the genial proprietor, as he always does, spared no pains to prepare a dinner in his best style. The menu was varied and the dishes excellently cooked and nicely served. During dinner the Fifth Regiment band played in the corridor . . . "

Among Those Present . . .

Premier J. H. Turner presided and on his right was Mr. Jeeves of McGregor and Jeeves, the contractors, and architect Rattenbury on the premier's left, while E. C. Howell, the superintendent of works, sat close by. Top dignitaries present were Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works Hon, G. B. Martin, and members of the legislature, R. P. Rithet, Harry Dallas Heimcken and John Braden.

Dallas Heimcken and John Braden.
Premier Turner, observed The Colonist,
"said that many of the younger men sitting around the table would live to see Victoria grow to a city whose buildings would extend far beyond their present bounds and later generations would have reason to thank the present one for a building that would last, and be a thing of beauty for hundreds of years

William Shackleford was chosen by the workmen to speak for them and he "in a neat little speech . . , would say that from the Atlantic to the Pacific there is no building as equally well built , . ." Imposing and as equally well built , ..." Imposing and solid, they would stand for centuries and be a monument that people yet unborn would look upon and commend the builders, but it must not be forgotten that these buildings are more than a monument. They are for people's representatives to meet in, and hoped that from those legislative halls laws would emanate that would make the conditions of labor such that British Columbia would become the leading province of the Dominion."

It was a merry night of celebratio out there on the shores of Oak Bay. were toasts galore, formal apeeches and im-promptu speeches and recitations and the boys asing with their arms about each other around the piano. The dinner was brought to a close "in time for everyone to get back to town by the half-past eleven car."

First Flagstaff

The first flagstaff in Parliament Square ent up in 1896: "The pole is 151 feet long . A gilt ball and an arrow showing the course of the wind . . . top the pole, which, owing to its immense length has two sets of stays to keep it in position."

That pole, as far as I can learn, did duty until 1926, when the present, tailer pole was erected. In late 1896, also, the Queen's Printer moved into the west wing and it was in 1897 that the buildings, though not complete, were lighted for the first time, in the same patsame pattern, apparently, as they are today. Our buildings in their lights are unique, and pictured by visitors from all around the world, yet I know individuals who'd like to tear out those thny bulbs and floodlight the place. Why cannot some people not leave well enough

Many famous people—kings and queens and princesses—have visited our parliament, but not a plaque is there to mark these occasions. How unimaginative can we be?

Many fashionable receptions have been held in the buildings, as instanced by this one, in 1908—"a brilliant society function" for the convention of the Canadian Mining Institute.

Beauty and Chivalry

The Colonist said an orchestra played in-spired music and "all went merrily as a mar-riage bell for B.C.'s capital had gathered 'her beauty and her chivalry.'"

It was so fashionable that the gowns were described: "Mrs. Richard McBride, the wife of the premier, wore a very handsome black net; Mrs. Henry Esson Young looked very sweet in white, and Mrs. D. M. Eberts was resplendent in a princess gown of rich mauve satin with garniture of white and gold sequins.

"Mrs. Justice Hunter was a very striking figure in a chocolate colored lace over pale yellow; Mrs. Harry Dallas Helmcken wore a yellow; Mrs. Harry Dallas Helmcken wore a very rich and beautiful toilet of turquoise satin and gold-spangled lace, strands of gold-heads and gold coil and gold tassels in her hair; Mrs. Judge Lampman appeared in blue, with handsome black sequin overdress; Mrs. Stewart Williams wore a blue striped satin with touches of black velvet; Miss Blakemore was in a pretty combination of cream lace, with bands of yellow; Miss Eberts in a rich white satin with pearl garniture; Miss Mc-Killigan looked very sweet in a pale blue silk with white lace trimmings; Miss Mary Lawson wore a cream lace; Miss (Nellie) Lugrin, her pretty plnk bridesmald's frock; Mrs. Brunswick Shaw, pale silk with white; Mrs. Nash,

Here, then, are a few of the historic bits and pieces. I think they add up to an historic whole that should be preserved, and not left to the whims of politicians and civil servants.

LEARNING at your LEISURE

Here comes the 100th volume in the Commonwealth and International Library of Science, Technology, Engineering and Liberal Studies, marking the achievement of the first part of an ultimate 1,000-volume library "in aid of education and the enjoyment of leisure."

Americans, who like short titles, would call it CILSTELS, perhaps.

In any event the 100th volume is Liberal udies: an Outline Course."

A. D. C. Peterson has welcomed the volume in his foreword, and naturally. He is the president of the Association for Liberal Education and director of the department of education at Oxford University.

Date of publication is February 19, and the publisher is Pergamon Press, Headington Hill Hall, Oxford. There are offices in London, Paris, New York, Frankfurt, and Galt, Ont.

The book is considered an important mile-stone in the progress of the British venture, launched in May of '62, with messages of good-will and encouragement from leading Commonwealth statemen, educators, industrialists and trade union leaders, all of them interested in modernizing education and developing Commonwealth co-operation. Some 500 at these leaders are members of the huge editorial advisory board.

A special hard-bound library edition of this series is available to public, technical college and school libraries. This enables even the small public library to stock and make available to borrowers a well-thought-out and integrated book series providing a wide range of odern text and references for full or part-time students, teachers and intelligent laymen.

Briefly, the aim of the series is to provide low-priced text and reference books so badiy needed both in the country of origin, Great Britain, and abroad to help meet the growing and urgent need of commerce and industry for more skilled workers, technicians, supervisors and managers in the factory, office or on the land. In short, here is a series which will increase the skill, efficiency and productivity— and the earnings!—of the labor and manage-

Martin Caidin:

JET SPEED PRODUCER

By JOHN BARKHAM

If Britain has its writing machine in John Greasey, who has produced several hundred mysteries in the last twenty years, and Belgium its phenomenal Simenon, who has published at least four short novels every year for the same period, America now has its Martin Caidin, of Plainview, Long Island, unquestionably that country's most prolific contemporary author. For the past decade no publishing season has been complete without three or four books by Caidin, usually on aviation or aero space, and all notable for their expertise and readability.

The present season is no exception. At least seven books by Mar-tin Caidin are scheduled by various publishers for 1964, and at least that many are in the works for next year. Moreover, they aren't "shorties" (though they are induhitably "quickies"), and each bears the stamp of authority. By the end of this year Caidin will have authored 55 published books, all but eight of them hard-cover volumes, and all in the space of 13 years. He estimates his aggregate readership at five millions or more around the world.

Who is this writing phenomenon? Oddly enough, though the byline is familiar to everyone interested in flying or space travel, no one knows much about Caidin himself. It required some expert per-suasion by Elliott Graham, the publicity director at his principal publisher. E. P. Dutton & Co., to lure the human writing machine out of his Long Island lair. I co-operated to the extent of conducting the interview as expeditiously as possible, realizing that I might be depriving readers of perhaps three or four chapters of a work in progress.

Caidin turned out to be a friendly and human fellow. Husky, spec-tacled, with receding black hair, he was genial and full of animated Mention anything to with aviation or rocketry, and he'd cap your comment with facts, sta-tistics and a relevant anecdote. To call him an ambulating encyclopedia on aviation would be no exaggeration at all.

Nor is he merely an armchair expert. A pilot in the Second World War, he still flies his own airplane. What's more, he owns a wartime German Messerschmidt complete with combat markings, which he flew out from Europe and still takes up occasionally for movie makers or simply for fun.

"What happens when commercial airline pilots see you bringing the Messerschmidt in for a land-Ing?"

Caidin chuckled. 'Their eyes pop.

reports to the tower.

You ought to hear their startled

Caidin lives in a suburban house with his wife and two young children. At any time he is at work on six or seven books simultane-ously. This spring, from Dutton alone (and he has books coming from other publishers as well), he has three books — a first novel, "Marconed," coming on March 31; "Hydrospace." a book on oceansgraphy written with a scientist, due in July; and a book on the Lockheed Hercules plane for older children scheduled for May.

Normally, Caidin told me, a book takes him about three weeks to write. That's correct—three weeks, Before that, however, he has re-searched it exhaustively. When all the material is finally in, he sets it out on a large, specially construced table, and creates a skeleton outline, an editorial scuffolding as it were, for the book. "If I see there are likely to be difficult sections, I write long memos to myself explaining the problem and usually end up by resolving them."

The actual writing is done on a typewriter at high speed, and often round the clock, "I have worked as long as 56 hours at a stretch, with only time out for brief naps coffee, and so on. I never rewrite. I go though my typescript, and my first version is the final one.

Don't get the iden that what emerges from the smoking typewriter is a hastily-written mishmash. Many of Caidin's books are used as text-books, including some at the American War College. Many have been translated into foreign languages.

"I believe a writer has to know what he's writing about, and I do. I produced a 120,000-word paper-back book on astronaut Allen B. Shepard's flight in a single weekend. It was on the stands 17 days after the flight—and there wasn't a technical error in it."

Caldin plans to maintain this prodigious schedule indefinitely, "I once tried taking a vacation in Florida, I lay on a beach, and within half an hour I was bored stiff. So I hired a typewriter and went to work. Before I went home I had a completed manuscript."

Wasn't he afraid of over-taxing his energies?

. Nonsense. I'm never happier than when I'm working. An Air Force doctor checked me over the other day for my pilot's li-cence. 'You're doing everything wrong." he said, 'but whatever it is. don't change it.' And I won't.

All the relaxation I need I get from flying."

Penny Novels have a Parallel

Piracies Exposed by U.K. Research

Probably most of the fiction written in the last 250 years has been ignored by literary critics, who have dismissed it as sub-literature, naive literature, or popular literature.

Lately, however, especially in Britain, literary sociologists and students seizing thesis atraws have turned their attention to the ephemeral penny novels and serials which biossomed (if the word is not too fragrant) with improved printing methods and increased literacy.

Two of the best of these studies are Altick's The English Common Reader (1957) and Dalziel's Popular Fiction A Hundred Years Age (1958).

Most commonly the interest has been in the working-class reader, rather than in the discreture, itself, and Mr. James, in Fiction For The Working Man, tries to correct this emphasis. His sub-title indicates the careful limits of his arguments: "A study of the Literature Produced for the Working Classes in Early Victorian England, 1830-50."

Digging in mouldy old collections, Mr. James has come up with some intriguing facts. He points to the transition from political to escapist literature as the reform movement lost steam, and shows the incredible amount of almost undisguised piagiarism that made the flood of cheap periodicals possible.

I had known, for example, that Dickens had suffered from literary piracy, but I had no idea just how widespread and bold-faced the thefts were,

While he is able to hint at the ways in which this working class fiction derives from the main stream of middle-class works, and also how it tends to be absorbed into juvenile fiction, James is, like all others in this area, unable to establish criteria for judging such writing.

After reading the book, I looked around for a twentieth-century equivalent and found some works staring at me in the super-market which might be classified as "Fiction for the Working Gat."

In with my frozen corn and salami I threw five of the Harlequin Romance series, called

Hospital In New Zealand, A Surgical Affair, A Case Of Heart Trouble, Nurse Prue In Ceylon, and Chine Wilde, Student Nurse. (I couldn't find the one a friend claims to have seen, with the wierdest title of all, Scatterbrain, Student Nurse.)

This series which originates in London, and is republished in Winnipeg, seems incredibly, horribly, and exclusively to be concerned with hospital romances. I won't trouble you with the authors' names, which are probably fakes, but the numbers on these paperbacks run to 772. Where will it all end?

Fortunately, that's an easy question to answer, for they all end in the same place, with lovely probationer nurse in hectic but handsome doctor's arms, and marriage just a heart beat away. (Actually in A Surgical Affair a female doctor plays the nurse's part, but she has to be stapid to do it.)

The plots are interchangeable, with romantic quadrilaterals instead of triangles, gossip in the numes' rooms, no smut (though the occasional unwed mother creeps in), and good clean fun mixed with good clean blood. I just got bored, and gave up the search for significance.

In fact, horror movies and television serials are the place to look for paralels with nineteenth-century fiction—and I'm too busy watching to write about them.

FRANZ JOSEPH:

GOD'S ANOINTED

Franz Josef's long reign is the focal point in Edward Crankshaw's magisterial account of the Habsburg twilight. The book is written in a formal tone which its formal subject no doubt calls for -so formal, indeed, that Franz Josef, the man, seldom emerges from the accoutrements of power in which the author garbs him. True, he was a monarch of Impregnable reserve always conscious of his exalted position; yet behind those formidable mutton-chop whiskers there was a man. It is ironic to me that the only really human portrait of him I ever came across was in a German novel never published in the west.

If Crankshaw doesn't tell us

THE PALL OF THE HOUSE OF HARBURG, by Edward Crankshow. New York: Viking Press. 446 pp. 87.30.

Emperor, there is little else his book can be faulted for. It is masterly dissection of an imperial edifice which owed little to conquest and much to alliances and royal marriages, which lifted the throne so far above politics that democracy could be encouraged long before it emerged elsewhere in Central Europe.

Crankshaw has a fine analytical chapter on the exercise of power by a monarchy. Franz Josef, he maintains, was neither a tyrant mor a benevolent de-pot. "But he was a born ruler, a talent as rare as any other highly developed talent. He possessed it as few have before or since. He was neither presumptuous nor arrogant: he was simply the Lord's anointed."

In one of the most animated passages in the book Crankshaw brings to life the Vienna of Franz Josef's youth—Europe's great capital of music, with Beethoven lately dead, Schubert and Mozart forgotten, Franz Liszt the pianist of the hour. Over it all, as though pre-ordained by God, presided the sminence in Schonbrunn Palace.

Strangely enough—and this is developed with impressive force—no monarch of the modern era was fated to become a greater instrument of tragedy than Franz Josef. His brother Maximilian met death before a firing squad in Mexico. His son and helr committed suicide at Mayerling. His estimaged Empress was murdered in Switzerland. Finally, in 1914, his nephew and heir, the Archulus Franz Ferdinand, met death at the hands of an assessin at Sarajevo. Franz Josef was now quite alone in an alien century.

Yet even this was not the end. It was Franz Josef, now 84, who was called upon to sign the mobilization order which plunged Europe into the First World War. Mercifully, he was dead two years later as his ancient empire fell to pieces around him. It swelled into a gotterdammerung which changed the face of Europe. It is good to have a book which matches the magnitude of this theme.

Faculty of Education,

University of Victoria

Recently I was asked to outline some of the characteristics that I would expect to find in a "literate" adolescent. A little thought, however, made it apparent that a proper definition of "literacy" encompasses a bewildering number of abilities. A literate man is not only an efficient reader, but also an effective speaker, a good listener, a capable writer, and today—in this age of television—an intelligent watcher.

I was forced to limit my discussion to reading. And here I would like to look briefly at the major qualifications of the literate man—a broad reading vocabulary, by which is meant the number of words he recognizes and understands when he sees them in print.

The English language is the richest in the world in the number and variety of its words. Our great literary tradition is one testimony to the resources of the language. Thus a major task of the public schools in attempting to produce a "literate" adolescent—and hence a literate adult later—is to introduce the student to as much of these linguistic riches as possible.

these linguistic riches as passible. Words are power. The man with a command over words feels confident. On the other hand, the more a person is bewildered by the words he hears and sees, the more he leels cut off from his society. He is an alien of sorts.

Language is one of the two or three things that differentiates man from the lower animals; as such, language is a vital part of every man's existence. He is constantly surrounded by language, and he experiences a good deal of trustration if he cannot read newspapers or magazines or books, or listen to radio and television without encountering frequent problems in meaning.

Since language is such a basic part of our emotional and intellectual life, one of the most vital steps towards literacy is to acquire what the Anglo-Saxons called a "word hoard," a well-stocked linguistic storage bin.

For a variety of reasons that are too complex to go into here, the average adolescent today is not acquiring the kind of vocabulary that might be expected of a "literate" man. He has too little sense of the variety and vitality of words. He normally feels no commitment to say or write anything but the obvious and the commonplace. He has no respect for words; indeed the use of a new or unusual word is often considered anobby, or showoff.

Den't misunderstand me. The Dun't misunderstand me. The average adolescent has plenty of ideas; he is interested in broadening his horizons; he is easily excited by an intellectual challenge. The trouble is that he doesn't realize that all the eagerness and good will in the world are lest if he lacks the raw material of expres-

If we are genuinely interested in raising the level of literacy among our youth, greater efforts must be made to prevent students from taking words for granted. If we fail to get them curious and sometimes excited about the power and wonder and glory of the English language, they will become lazier as time goes by. If they meet unknown words, they will skip them—after all, what difference can one word make among hundreds? We must make them feel that they have compromised themselves if they allow physical and mental laziness to control their reading habits. Such laziness—and we all suffer from it—is a retreat from literacy.

In Language:

THE POWER and GLORY

After all, our society generally rewards linguistic competence. To be able to handle words is of practical importance; indeed, control of language often separates the men from the boys both socially and economically. The bookstands are continually aflower with such titles as "Improve Your Wordpower." or "How to Build Your Vocabulary," or "30 Days to a More Powerful Vocabulary," Newspapers and magnines regularly run columns and quizzes designed to improve the reader's grasp of the language. There is no doubt that if the young person wants practical reasons why he should fortify his vocabulary, he can find plenty of them.

I admit, of course, that unless a student goes on to college, he will likely not be called upon to read a very high-powered vocabulary. But what the average adolescent considers "high powered," and what the outside world considers "high powered," are often two different things.

For instance, most high school students would have some trouble defining many of the following words: blatant, naive, nebulous, vehement, chagrin, plebeian, tempestuous, fair, and bizarre. No, these are not from crusty school books, but from a single sports page of a Victoria newspaper.

What about these words: amalgamated, adaptable, phobia, habitat, impenetrable, equivalents, ultimate, dank, and exhortation. All from a single weekend comic sec-

What I am suggesting is that unless a reader is quite at home with such words, he is reading below the level of the media of mass communication. Surely, if we can say anything definite about mass communication, we can say that its language is more or less directed at the average man. How well, the high school student must ask himself, do I stack up against the average? For most adolescents, I think that a realization of their lack of even such minimum literacy should be a sobering and humbling experience.

I am not, by the way, one of these corny people who sit around adding up things that are wrong with adolescents. Linguistic laziness is as common among adults as it is among teen-agers. It is not phony humility when I say that I am as guilty as anyone—and I'm supposed to make part of my living using and talking about words.

If I have singled out the adolescent for special attention, it is only because there is still time for him to shake off this lethargy, this carelessness about language before such attitudes become ingrained. I want him to respect words, to stand in awe of them sometimes, and to understand that if he does not get interested in words in high school, likely he never will.

Words are power. To desire to build some of this power into one-self is the beginning of literacy, a commodity too rare in these times.

TANGLE of the ISLES

did not depend on kelp that had been torn loose and washed up on the beach, but cut fresh plants with a three-sided cutter which they slipped over the bulb and allowed to slide down the stem to the bottom where a quick jerk cut it. About the longest pieces they used measured ten fathoms and many were shorter than that. The lines were left to soak in a running brook for several days, then they were tied together with a special knot that would not slip and partially dried in smoke. Then they were further dried in the sun, and brought in, carefully coiled, each night to avoid the dew. When quite dry they were brittle but became strong and pliable as cod line when wet.

The usual length was from eighty to a hundred fathoms, though fishing was seldom attempted at that depth except for black cod. Generally the kelp fishing lines were used in fishing hallbut with special hooks suspended just above the bottem by a system of floats. Specimens of these lines may be seen in the Provincial Museum here, as well as the hooks. Precisely similar kelp fish lines were used on the west coast of Scotland until comparatively recent times.

There were two types of halibut hooks and one of them was made by bending rods of hemlock into a precise shape. To effect the bending, the rod was slipped into a hollow kelp stem which was then heated in the fire. The water in the kelp turned to steam, heated and softend the wood which was then bent into the required shape while still soft and tied so that it would stay like that after drying. Steam, generated in the same way, was also used to cure earache or headachs by the Indians at Sitka and probably elsewhere. A suitable section of kelp was cut, just a few inches long, the smaller end inserted in the patient's ear and the other end held against a hot stone to make the steam. At least the patient knew that something was being done for him.

The large bulbs, or air bladders, at the end of the stem also found a number of uses. They made excellent containers for liquids, such as seal oil or eulachon oil, or water and, when sliced open, were excellent for keeping bait soft and fresh,

Sections of kelp, tied to a stone and lowered to the bottom of the sea were used in catching sea urchins. Their position was marked by buoys and left for several hours. Then the fisherman pulted in very gently. If he were lucky, he would find a sea urchin feeding on the kelp. These were broken open like an egg, and eaten raw. They are said to be delicious, with a peppery taste. I'll take their word for it.

Nor did the medicine man omit the use of kelp in his magic. Belts were woven of the thin stems and tied in most intricate knots, believed to have protective value, and when men went to war or on slave raids, they tied their long hair at the back of their necks with a line of keip. The large fronds were laid above

The large fronds were laid above high water mark and the salt in them allowed to crystallize out. When dry it was scraped off and traded with inland tribes who had ao salt.

Poultices were made from mashed kelp, and the bulb made an excellent instrument for administering an oil enema.

an exterior instrument for administering an oil enema.

For sheer scullduggery, this trick played by the medicine men would be hard to beat. To convince spectators at the winter ceremonies that he could converse with the spirits of the other world, the medicine man first dug a trench from the central fire in the meeting house to the wall and under it to the outside. In this trench he buried a long hollow kelp stem, all in secret of course, Then he covered in his trench. With the aid of an accomplice outside he had no trouble in getting voices to answer him, apparently from the heart of the fire. The effect on the onlookers was most antisfactory.
